ZEPPELIN OVER HALF WAY ON HOP TO TOKYO

Giant Air Liner Is Racing East Above Lonely Siberian Plains.

KEEPS CLOSE TOUCH WITH HOME HANGAR

Eckener Radioes Gas Supply Plentiful; Speed 68 Miles an Hour.

SHIP STRIKES AREA OF COLD WEATHER

Flight Is Favored by Winds and All Is Reported Well on Board.

(Associated Press.)

The Graf Zeppelin, racing eastward toward Tokyo through the short Siberian summer night, last night (Friday) passed the halfway mark of the second leg of her round-the-world flight.

At 6 p. m. Eastern Standard time a report to her home hangar at Friedrichshafen gave her position as 80 degrees east longitude, 62 degrees north latitude. This placed her about 2,000 miles from her home hangar with only a slightly greater distance between her and Tokyo. This position is about 300 miles nothweest of Tomsk.

An unofficial report giving the same information said that the dirigible had headed for the northen end of Lake Baikal. Should she pursue that course, the continuation of the straight line would carry her across Harbin, Manchuria, to the approximate situation of Tokyo.

The airship left Friedrichshafen at 11:34 p. m. Eastern Standard time on Wednesday. At the time given in the report to the Zeppelin works she had thus been in the air almost 42½ hours, and her average speed had been about 68 miles an hour.

Blazing a dirigible trail never before flown by man, the great German craft, with her crew of 40 and international passenger list of 20, sailed serenely up over the shoulder of Asia toward the Arctic circle. Since rising from Friedrichshafen at dawn Thursday she has been eating away the 7,000-mile distance from her home hangar to Tokyo at an average speed of more than 60 miles an hour.

Verst by verst, mile by mile, a new chapter of the romance of the air is told by terse dispatches marking the progress of the great airship.

Soviet Frontier Crossed.

Crossing the western Soviet frontier near Dvinsk at 2:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) Friday, the Graf Zeppelin streaked across European Russia in about eight hours. Before 10 a. m. (E. S. T.) she had left Europe behind as she crossed the Urals, where runs the continental line. On the railway line from Perm, west of the Urals, to Nahezhdinsky, on the eastern slope, a signpost marks the boundary. On one side of the pole reads Europe and on the other Asia.

Skirting storm and bad weather, nosing through clouds and treacherous air currents like a thing alive, the Zeppelin left Europe behind before noon, cleared the Urals, and roared on into Siberia. Already she is in touch with the Russian wireless station at Irkutsk on Lake Baikal.

Over Siberian Steppes Today.

By Saturday morning the Graf Zeppelin will be over the heart of the Siberian steppes, but 500 or 600 miles north of the Transsiberian Railway Line. No lonelier part of the world exists than the wastes of plains and shallow river valleys through which great streams flow to the Arctic.

But all is well aboard the airship, according to messages radioed to Friedrichshafen and Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the craft, is well within the scheduled time of the flight. He estimates 120 hours of flying necessary to reach Tokyo from Friedrichshafen while the Graf is capable of remaining aloft 150 hours. The airship is due in Tokyo Monday.

New York, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Copyrighted articles to the New York American and allied Hearst newspapers from the three correspondents aboar dthe Graf Zeppelin on the Hearst-Zeppelin around-the-world flight placed the dirigible at the confluence of the Obi and Irtish Rivers at 5 p. m., New York time, today.

Extreme cold was reported and the Zeppelin had descended from 3,700 feet to a height of 2,500 feet. The dirigible was flying at a sped of 73 miles an hour.

Flying Weather Good.

Flying weather so far has been excellent, but the airship expected to run into a depression tomorow.

Dr. Eckener announced at dinner tonight that the ship still ihad fuel for 10 0hours of flying.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Saturday, August 17 (A.P.).—The Zeppelin Works here reported this morning that the Graf Zeppelin was at 80 east longitude 62 north latitude at 11 p. m. Friday, Greenwich meridian time (6 p. m. Friday, Eastern stanard time).

Girl, 9, Auto Victim, Smiles Despite Pain

Father and Younger Sister, In Role of Nurses, Minister to Invalid Whose Injured Leg Will Keep Her Indoors For at Least Two Months.

Her right leg in splints and with no prospect of being able to walk for at least two months, Helen Lewis, 9 years old, 1510 Fuller street northwest, is still cheerful at the little home where her father and a younger sister are giving her loving care following an automobile accident.

Josephine, 8 years old, is performing all the duties of a nurse for her injured sister while the father, Frank Lewis, is doing his bit to make his daughter comfortable despite the fact that he has no funds with which to send the girl to a hospital.

The accident in which Helen was injured occurred Wednesday afternoon as the father, with his two daughters, was on the way home from St. Paul's Parochial School. Holding each of the girls by the hand, Lewis started across the intersection at New Hampshire avenue and Q street northwest. An automobile bore down upon them and Helen was hurled several feet to the curb. The motorist drove on.

Lewis, who has cared for his daughters since the death of their mother seven years ago, took the injured girl home and called Dr. Edward Wilson Nicklas, 2200 Nineteenth street northwest, who has treated her daily since that time. Torn ligaments and a fracture will keep Helen off her feet for two months, the doctor says.

When the accident happened little Josephine kept her wits. She remembered the number of the automobile which struck her sister and told her father. He in turn reported that license tag to the police. After an investigation police summoned Mrs. Vera V. Eakin, 3016 Tilden street northwest, to appear in Police Court to answer to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident without revealing her identity.

Yesterday Mrs. Eakin pleaded not guilty to the charge and demanded a jury trial. Her bond was fixed at $500 and the case scheduled for September 12. Police of the Third Precinct, who questioned Mrs. Eakin when she voluntarily called there to answer the summons, declared the woman admitted seeing the man and two children at the intersection, but did not know any one had been hit.

Lewis, who does janitor work by the hour at various residences in the neighborhood, had resisted all efforts of welfare agencies to take his children from him. He has given references to show that he is able

UNIFORM FEDERAL LEAVES ARE ASKED

Interdepartmental Group Is Drafting Measure for Congress.

REFORM IS HELD NEEDED

A bill to liberalize and standardize annual and sick leave in the Government service probably will be enacted into law at the next session of Congress. Such a measure will be drafted by an interdepartmental committee made up of representatives of the various departments and bureaus and headed by Maj. Alfred E. Erk, of the chief coordinator's office.

The committee has been studying the leave problem for several months and has found that there is much room for reform. In its deliberations it has consulted Luther C. Steward, president of the Federation of Federal Employes, which organization initiated the movement for a uniform leave law.

It is popularly believed that all Government workers get 30 days annual leave and 15 days sick leave. This is not so. Some employes get less than 15 days annual leave, and there are some—workers in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, for example—who get no sick leave at all.

As a matter of fact, the granting of annual leave to employes is entirely in the hands of the division chief, who may or may not let them go. The Federation of Federal Employes would have the law so written that the employes would be definitely assured of so many days leave.

The federation also is in favor of a plan of cumulative sick leave. There are thousands of employes who fail to use up 15 days sick leave in a year. Yet if one of those employes has to undergo an operation and is absent for 90 days, say, he is "docked" once his fifteen days sick leave and 30 days annual leave is exhausted.

The federation is in favor of a plan under which unused sick leave could be accumulated up to 120 days, thus guarding the employe against loss of pay if he should be stricken with a serious illness.

So far the interdepartmental committee that is studying the leave problem has not made public its conclusions, if, indeed, it has reached any. Consequently it is not known whether its bill will incorporate the federation's views.

William H. McReynolds, who directed a Nation-wide survey to determine how personnel conditions in private business compared with those in the Government service, has definitely decided to recommend to Congress that a uniform leave law be enacted at the next session.

INTERVENTION SEEN AS U. S. OBLIGATION

Lawyer-Author Shows Policy in Central America in Talk at Institute.

DEBATE NEW WATERWAY

University, Va., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Hugh Gordon Miller, New York lawyer and author, upheld intervention in Central America as the "moral obligation" of the United States in freeing the Panama Canal area of war, in a speech on "The Monroe Doctrine" at the Institute of Public Affairs tonight.

Great Britain and the United States have like duties to keep unimpaired two great avenues of commerce, the Suez and Panama Canals, he said, urging closer union of the two English-speaking nations in fulfilling these obligations.

The speaker made one criticism in connection with intervention. "President Coolidge," he said, "was overcautious in withdrawing Marines from Nicaragua."

Prof. William E. Dodd, of the University of Chicago, "is blind to the facts of recent history," Mr. Miller declared, answering Dr. Dodd's charge earlier in the institute that "a gospel for the weak has become a cover for the exploitation of Cuba, of Nicaragua and San Domingo. Since American intervention, order and progress have emerged from chaos," said Mr. Miller.

As to imperialism, he declared, Woodrow Wilson's statement that this Nation "would never take another foot of territory by conquest" was "a complete answer in the future to the charge."

If the great powers welcome the United States as fellow policemen in China, he said, "and even complain that this country does not go further than she is willing to go in her Far Eastern intervention, there is no reason why they should criticize the United States for acting on precisely the same principle in a region where she has acquired a definite franchise after long years of negotiations—a franchise which, unless fulfilled in good faith, will be subject ultimately to a movement tending toward forfeiture."

Danna G. Monroe, representative of the United States Department of State, declared that the welfare and independence of Caribbean countries

SNOWDEN FIRM ON WAR DEBTS; SPURNS OFFER

Rejection of Compromise by Powers Is Seen as Deadlock Delay.

FRACTIONAL INCREASE IN ANNUITIES REFUSED

Chancellor Insists Young Plan Apportionment Be Altered.

HE LEAVES WAY OPEN TO AVERT BREAKDOWN

French, Italian, Belgian and Japanese Delegates Will Reply Today.

The Hague, Aug. 16 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Philip Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, today turned down a compromise offer made by the French, Belgian, Italian and Japanese delegations under which Great Britain would receive about three-fourths of the increase demanded by him in the British share of German reparation under the Young plan.

In doing so he again asked, as he has been doing for the last ten days, that the apportionment of the Young plan annuities among Germany's creditors be altered to bring Great Britain's share into accordance with the Spa percentages. He firmly refused to consider any other settlement.

Snowden's refusal of the offered compromise has not yet been put in writing. It was made verbally when Henri Jaspar, Premier of Belgium, who has been acting as go-between in private negotiations between the British and Latin delegations, handed him a memorandum consisting of four typewritten pages outlining the offer in detail.

Expect Written Rejection.

Premier Jaspar asked Snowden to embody his rejection of the offer in a formal note to be delivered to the French, Belgian, Italian and Japanese delegations. These four delegations gave out tonight that they expect to have Snowden's written reply by tomorrow noon.

In consequence, the meeting of the finance commission slated for tomorrow morning has been postponed to be subject to the call of its chairman, Baron Houtart, of Belgium. The political commission's scheduled meetings have been similarly postponed for several days.

As a result of the deadlock in the conference, emphasized by Snowden's stand today, Premier Aristide Briand called on Gustav Stresemann, Germany's foreign minister, this afternoon and informed him that he is in no position ot announce the date on which France will agree to Rhineland evacuation. The French premier had been expected to make this announcement at tomorrow's meeting of the political commission, which has now been put off until Monday.

Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, also discussed Rhineland evacuation in a private talk with Stresemann today.

Snowden Averts Breakdown.

By consenting to postponement of the financial commission's next meeting until he has answered today's memorandum from the nations insisting upon integral acceptance of the Young plan, Snowden today averted a breakdown of The Hague conference tomorrow.

By rejecting the concrete offer made by the French, Italians, Belgians and Japanese, the British chancellor has at the same time made eventual collapse of the parley appear even more inevitable than it has been at any

KELLOGG PACT SET AT NAUGHT IN MANCHURIA

Both Russia and China Accused of Invading Other's Land.

NANKING IS EXPECTED TO APPEAL TO U. S.

Self-Defense Claim Puts Signatory Powers in Quandary.

Officials Are Still Hopeful Only Border Clashes Will Eventuate.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

The prestige of the Kellogg pact as a preventive of war took a sharp tumble yesterday as a result of reports from Nanking and Moscow that the pact is not being observed by either Russia or China in the present crisis. Both nations are charged with having invaded the other's territory, thereby committing acts of war in defiance of the pact and conducive to outbreaks of serious hostilities.

Formal protest by the Nationalist government of China against Russian invasion of Chinese territory is expected at the State Department as a result of unofficial reports via Reuter from Nanking. Officials here expressed surprise over the reported extent of a Russian offensive along the Manchurian border and were hopeful last night that widespread invasion will not be undertaken. It has been understood here for weeks that the Russians were in no position to launch an offensive and that the Nationalist government at Nanking has been aware of this fact.

Pact's Weakness Shown.

Pending study of the anticipated Chinese appeal to signatories of the Kellogg pact officials here were inclined to believe that China must rely upon her own troops to protect her territory against invasion. It is conceded that no reliance can be placed on the pact if one of the disputing nations chooses to disregard it and it is furthermore admitted that it would be suicidal for a nation to refrain from taking the necessary steps in its own defense.

The weakness in the pact is being demonstrated in advance of serious hostilities, according to the consensus here. Neither Russia nor China violates the pact by waging a defensive war against an aggressor nation Russia, therefore, has paved the way for defensive operations in case of necessity, it is explained in Moscow China also has prepared a campaign of defense against aggression. If war breaks out both nations will claim to be fighting a defensive war against the other and the Kellogg pact simply does not apply to either. Whenever a nation engages in war it claims to be fighting to defend itself from aggression and if hostilities unfortunately break out in Manchuria the same old story will be rehearsed under new surroundings.

Still Hope for Peace.

There is, however, continued hope here that border clashes will not lead to serious warlike operations. Neither China nor Russia desire to become involved in war. Both nations are anxious to remain at peace and have demonstrated this since the controversy became acute. But the Chinese are not willing to yield to Russia's demands and the Russians are becoming restless over the prospect

SENATE BODY FINISHES TARIFF LABORS BY CUT IN HOUSE SUGAR RATE

Victim of Influenza Placed in Gallinger Madhouse, Charge

Kin of U. of M. Professor Says Blood Test Was Incompetently Taken; Found Food Unpalatable and Conditions in General Intolerable.

This is the seventh of a series of articles concerning the conditions now existing at Gallinger Municipal Hospital. In previous stories Duncan Price of The Post's reportorial staff, who feigned amnesia and spent three nights and two days in the hospital as a "patient" in order to ascertain the conditions existing there, told of the conditions, his personal experiences and the treatment of various patients. The following story relates the experiences of a former patient, who voluntarily offers his statements on conditions at the hospital.—Editor's note.

By DUNCAN PRICE.

S. Robert Folitz, 456 Eighty-first street, Brooklyn, N. Y., son-in-law of Dr. J. B. S. Norton, 57 Columbia avenue, Hyattsville, Md., a professor at the University of Maryland, declares he received little medical attention and was treated in almost inhuman fashion when he was taken to Gallinger Hospital last Christmas.

Stricken with the influenza, Folitz says he fainted while bowling at Ninth and G streets four days before Christmas. He was taken in an ambulance to Emergency Hospital first, then carried to Gallinger, where he was placed in the psychopathic observation department, with nervous and mental patients.

"When I arrived," Folitz says, "my clothes were removed and I was given the scanty hospital garb. As it was at night, I was immediately put to bed. The nurse on duty told the orderly not to put me in a certain bed, for it had bedbugs on it. She explained, 'this is a nice dressed young man, and should not be put on a bug-infested bed.'"

Thoroughly disgusted with the hospital and alarmed by the conditions, Folitz declares he refused to submit to the taking of blood for a test, and to take the medicine.

"I refused to allow them to take blood for a test," he adds, "because I saw an orderly stick another patient with a needle three times in an attempt to take a specimen of his blood."

"The food was terrible," he continues. "Milk was the only food I partook of while I was there, and I had to beg the nurse for it."

Explaining to the doctors that he had money and was far from being a subject of charity, he says, he asked to be transferred to some other hospital But the doctors refused the request saying there were not many influenza cases in Washington at the time and they wanted to keep all of them together. Consequently, he relates, he had to stay in the department with chronic alcoholic, dope, mental and nervous patients.

"On the day before Christmas," Folitz says, "a doctor came in the Proposed Levy on Cuban Product Slashed to 2.20 Cents.

SCHEDULE ADOPTED BY BALLOT OF 7 TO 4

Existing Duty Increased, World Charge Fixed at 2.75 Cents.

DOZEN AMENDMENTS RECEIVE REJECTIONS

Norris Debenture and Glass Stock Sale Tax Plans Are Disapproved.

(Associated Press.)

The Senate finance committee Republicans yesterday completed rewriting of the House tariff bill's rate sections by approving a reduction to 2.20 cents a pound in the House levy of 2.40 cents on Cuban raw sugar.

The 2.20 cent rate, adopted by a vote of 7 to 4, represents an increase of forty-four-hundredths of a cent over the existing duty of 1.76 cents against Cuban sugar, but a decrease of twenty-hundredths of a cent from that proposed by the House.

A proposal to restrict the duty-free importation of sugar from the Philippines was rejected. The vote on this was not announced, but it was reported as around 9 to 2.

The vote on the sugar rates came after a motion by Senator Shortridge, of California, to adopt the House rates was turned down, 9 to 2, Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, voting with the California senator for the higher House duties.

World Rate 2.75 Cents.

The sugar tariff against other countries, or what is known as the world rate, was fixed at 2.75 cents a pound, as against 3 cents in the bill and 2.02 cents under existing law. Cuba is allowed a 20 per cent reduction in duty by treaty, so the finance group's Cuban duty, if finally enacted, would be the same as the present world rate on raw sugar.

After approving some increases and one reduction in other items of the House sugar schedule, the Republican committeemen rejected a dozen or more of amendments which senators had announced an intention to offer on the floor, including the Norris export debenture proposal and the Glass stock sale tax amendment.

Strenuous efforts, however, are expected to be made on the floor for both the debenture and stock tax proposals, the former being designed to make the tariff effective on surplus agricultural commodities and the latter being aimed at stock gambling.

Debenture Twice Voted.

The Senate twice voted the debenture into the farm relief bill by a margin of three votes over President Hoover's protest, but an overwhelming rejection of the proposal by the House led to its ultimate defeat.

The explanation for its disapproval yesterday by the Republican committeemen was that it had no place in a tariff bill. The same explanation was given for the turning down of the stock tax amendment.

Following the meeting of the majority committeemen Chairman Smoot issued a statement declaring the sugar duties agreed upon would mean an increase in consumers' costs of about 22 cents per person per year and asserting they would "permit the sugar industry of the United States to live with a small profit." The chairman was among those voting for the 2.20 Cuban rate.

Stephen H. Love, president of the United States Beet Sugar Association, in a statement, however, said rejection of the House rates meant that the domestic industry would be "gravely retarded." He served notice that the sugar producers would con-

Rock Springs, Wyo., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Nick Mamer and Art Walker, piloting the Spokane Sun God in an attempt to set a new long distance and endurance refueling flight record, dropped a note to the airport here tonight, saying they would circle over Rock Springs until daylight.

The Sun God previously had made four refueling contacts with a plane rushed here this afternoon from Cheyenne at the rquest of the endurance ship's pilots, taking on 300 gallons of gasoline.

The refueling plane was flying near the Sun God and all lights on the airport here were turned on so that either or both planes could land if necessary. The reason for the endurance pilots deciding to stay here all night, instad of proceeding to Cheyenne, where arrangements had been made for a night refueling was not known.

HALF-FARE PROBLEM RESTS WITH BOARD

Hanna States Commission Can Order Rates for School Children.

AGREEMENT IS INDICATED

Half-fares for school children are up to the Public Utilities Commission, John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Traction Co., told William McK Clayton yesterday.

Hanna's declaration was made in the course of answering Clayton during cross-examination in the final day of the Capital Traction's presentation of evidence before the Public Utilities Commission in support of its demand for a 10-cent cash fare, with four token for 30 cents.

Hanna refused to approve the half-fares for school children and seemed dubious about the authority of the Utilities Commission to order it, but said that his company would prefer to have the commission act on the proposition. He indicated that if the commission did order half fares for school children the Capital Traction would not object. The loss which would be suffered by his company under such an arrangement he said, would be so little as to have a minor

Man, Accused of Arson, Suicide as Jury Indicts

Kansas City Druggist Shoots Himself; Was Called "Brains" in Series of Insurance Plots—Several Lives Lost in Fires.

Kansas City, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A few minutes before he was indicted for first degree murder as leader in an alleged arson plot which killed three firemen, and mentioned in connection with other property destruction, Dady M. Carey, sr., a druggist, today took his life with a revolver.

The indictment by a special county grand jury followed the appearance before that body of Charles J. Frederick, a city detective. In a signed statement Frederick charged Carey was responsible for the alleged arson blast of August 5, for which he was indicted; for an explosion in June, 1925, which destroyed the Gillis Theater and killed six persons, and for other alleged arson acts.

Carey inflicted the fatal wound in an obscure downtown hotel a few minutes before three indictments were returned. He lived several hours after the suicide attempt, but did not regain consciousness.

Late today two alleged companions of Carey in the most recent arson plot were arraigned on first degree murder indictments. The men, Arch Glover and D. L. Piggott, previously had been charged in a State warrant with the same crime. They pleaded not guilty and were held for trial August 26.

Two other men, Durwood Dailey and J. L. (Pat) Crowe, have not been indicted, but are held without bond on murder charges.

Jail Delivery at Fairfax Is Blocked in Nick of Time

Tipped Off By Trusty, Sheriff Rushes to Cell to Find Trio Preparing to Flee Through Laboriously Dug Tunnel.

A jail delivery that had been laboriously planned was narrowly averted last night at the historic Fairfax, Va., jail when a trusty tipped off Sheriff E. P. Kirby. Three alleged roobers, imprisoned in a steel cage, had dug their way through a concrete floor, tunneled under the jail, and were prepared to escape when they were apprehended.

The men had used a stove poker that had been purloined to break the concrete and remove the earth. The job had taken a week, they admitted, after being caught.

Sheriff Kirby, with Wilson Darr, deputy sheriff, whose home adjoins the jail, rushed to the cell of the trio upon receiving the information and found the men getting ready to flee. They were placed under guard for the night.

The jailed men are William Varisek and Robert S. Ray, who were taken to Fairfax last Monday and bound over to the grand jury on a charge of breaking into a store on the Camp Humphries road, and George Brown, who was arrested in New York ten days ago on a charge of highway robbery in 1927.

This was the fifth time that an attempt has been made to break out of the Fairfax Jail in the last eighteen months, according to Sheriff Kirby. One man has escaped. The sheriff said that he had made frequent appeals to the county board that a new jail was needed, but that no action has yet been taken.

tinue their fight for the 2.40 cent duty.

The sugar schedule as now written would begin with a rate of 1.5425 cents a pound on sugar testing not over 75 sugar degrees and add an additional .575 ten-thousandths of a cent for each additional sugar degree up to 100 degrees with a dividing line at 96 degrees for raws as at present or 94 degrees as in the House bill.

By this method the rate approved yesterday on 100-degree refined sugar would be 2.34 cents a pound, against 1.91 cents in the existing law and 2.80 cents in the House bill.

Thus the differential between House rates on Cuban raw and refined would be decreased and even the existing spread would be contracted. The present differential is 15 points, but under the finance committee schedule it would be only 14

The dispute over blackstrap molasses was left for the floor, the Republican committeemen leaving the House rate alone. This is virtually the same as the present rate of 1-6 of a cent a gallon, but under the bill it is figured on a different basis.

Other changes approved would increase the House rate of 7½ cents a pound on maple sugar to 9 cents. The present duty is 4 cents.

Maple Sirup Duty Increased.

The rate on maple sirup as approved would be increased to 6 cents a pound as against 5 cents in the bill and 4 cents at present.

The duty on dextrose, or corn sugar, and dextrose sirup would be left the same as in the House bill, 2 cents a pound as against 1½ cents in existing law.

The duty on sugar cane, which the House fixed at $3 a ton as against $1 at present, would be made $2 a ton under the action of the Republican committeemen.

In explanation of this change it was said that Porto Rico, an American possession having the same tariff rates as the United States, imported large quantities of cane from Santo Domingo, and it was thought a $3 rate would amount to an embargo in this trade and cut down tremendously Porto Rican revenues.

After completing revision of all the House rates, the committeemen adjourned until Monday afternoon, when they will start consideration of the administrative sections of the bill.

To Be Announced Next Week.

All of the rates are to be made public early next week simultaneously with the turning over of the bill in tentative form to the Democratic members of the committee for their consideration.

The Senate reconvenes Monday, but under a gentlemen's agreement between party leaders three-day recesses will be taken until September 4 to permit the finance group to complete its report on the measure.

Smoot, who abandoned his sliding scale sugar tariff after a public hearing disclosed unanimous opposition to it from the industry, said the increase made by the committee over the present law was $8.80 a ton. Figuring imports at 3,000,000 tons, this would amount to $26,400,000.

"This is the amount," he said, "the free trader could claim the increase would cost the American consumer. This increase would average about 22 cents per person per year."

Although he joined six of his colleagues in voting for the 2.20 cent Cuban duty, Smoot thought this "rather small" compared with other rates in the bill on agricultural commodities.

TARIFF "PROTESTS" DENIED BY STIMSON

Notes of Other Nations Are Only Statements of Statistics, He Says.

NOTHING NEW, IS CLAIM

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Stimson entered the tariff controversy for the second time yesterday with a statement that the communications on the subject received from 29 foreign countries and colonial possessions of the British Empire were not protests, but mere "statistical statements" presented for the "information and consideration of this Government."

Issued through the office of Senator Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, as a summary of the State Department's attitude toward the foreign tariff communications, the statement said these documents had been "popularly but incorrectly called 'protests.'"

"They are in fact for the most part," the Secretary said, "statistical statements with regard to the trade between the United States and the country in question and usually touch upon certain specific commodities which are of importance in that trade."

The communications, he continued, were nothing new in American tariff history.

Believed Blow at Democrats.

Secretary Stimson, who first came into the tariff picture by opposing before the House ways and means committee any disturbance of existing free trade relations with the Philippines, where he served as Governor General before accepting the Hoover Cabinet post, was believed to have aimed his statement at interpretations placed upon the foreign communications by Democrats.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, has held that the documents disclosed "an unprecentedly widespread international impression that this Government has inaugurated an imperialistic policy in trade and commerce as baneful in its effect as an imperialistic war."

The State Department head listed five Latin American and 24 European and Asiatic countries and colonial possesions as having sent communications to the Washington Government, and declared the interest thus evinced abroad in the present readjustment of the tariff was "perfectly normal."

Nothing New in Affair, Claim.

"So far as our relations with foreign countries are concerned," he added, "there is nothing new in the present situation. Communications similar to those received this year were received in 1921, when the present tariff act was under consideration by Congres sand the Department of State has always been the medium of transmission to the appropriate committees of Congress."

Referring to communications from the five Latin American countries, Mr. Stimson said all of them touched upon agricultural products, "for which there is a generally recognized need for protection."

Quoting from a report declaring that there was hardly a European or South American country that had not made vigorous protest against the tariff, the Secretary said this obviously was incorrect, for Uruguay was the only South American country to have addressed a communication to the United States.

COMPROMISE OFFERS SPURNED BY SNOWDEN

time since the conference opened on August 6.

The Hague conference appears hopelessly jammed unless Snowden, in his written response to today's communication, leaves the door open to further negotiations. The British delegation contends that he has never failed to do this.

The British chancellor's position, on which hte fate of the conference continues to turn, is that he is not asking Germany's other creditors to pass the hat until they get together enough money to give Great Britin the same share of reparations she would have had if the Spa percentages had been directly adhered to in drawing the Young plan.

Asks Study by Subcommittee.

But he does ask that a subcommittee be appointed to study the distribution of the Young plan annuities as if they had never been agreed to by the committee of experts at their Paris parleys. He holds that the experts had no business touching the Spa percentages and should have confined themselves to fixing the total amount of Germany's indebtedness and the schedule of annuities under which it was to be liquidated.

Of the four delegations opposing the British chancellor's thesis the Italians alone are bound by their government not to touch a line of the Young plan. It is reported tonight that they are asking Premier Benito Mussolini whether, in the light of Snowden's fresh ultimatum, their original orders stand.

Immediately after Premier Jaspar delivered today's compromise offer to Snowden, translators were put to work rendering it into English. When Jaspar returned at 4 o'clock, by appointment, Snowden was ready with his refusal to accept its terms.

Memorandum's New Offer.

The memorandum offered what is figured to be an average increase in unconditional annuities payable by Germany of 58,000,000 marks ($13,815,000), beginning the first year with 28,000,000 marks ($6,669,000) and increasing to 116,000,000 marks ($27,631,000) in the thirty-seventh year.

This increase, it is understood, is possible on account of the margin made available by paying off the Dawes loans. Other smaller sums from other sources are included, such as the margin in the cash account of the reparations commission, but are not definitely fixed.

The impression given out at the British delegation today was that Snowden did not take long considering this accumulation of sums to give Great Britain an extra 2 per cent of the total reparations payments and thereby bring them up to what British share would be if the Spa percentages were adhered to.

He rejected the memorandum's proposals as a whole because they were in the form of a compromise offer and not a straight acceptance of his demand that a subcommittee be appointed to reapportion the Young plan annuities.

OIL MAN'S LAWYER HELD IN DEATH PLOT

Police Arrest Him Trying to Force Employer Into an Auto.

SHORTAGE IS REPORTED

Ponca City, Okla., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—On a charge of "attempt and conspiracy to kidnay, rob and kill by poisoning," F. C. Hyde, young Ponca city lawyer and formerly secretar, to Samuel C. Collins, a former vice president of the Marland Oil Co., was held in jail tonight at Newkirk. Authorities believe the young attorney attempted to poison Collins last night to cover up alleged shortages in accounts he handled for the oil man.

Hyde was arrested late last night in front of Collins' home here when caught, authorities said, in an attempt to kidnap Collins. A man whose name was withheld had revealed to officers that Hyde sought to engage him in carrying out the alleged plot against the former Marland official. At the request of county authorities the man pretended to go through with Hyde's plan.

Ofiicers lay in hiding as Hyde and the man drove up to the Collins home last night, not making their presence known until after Collins had been blindfolded at the point of a pistol and taken to Hyde's automobile. Collins, who had been apprised of the plot against him, refused until last night to believe Hyde could have anything to do with it.

When arrested, Hyde had in his possession a large quantity of a deadly poison and a pint of whisky which contained the same poison. He refused to talk.

Investigation revealed today, authorities said, that Hyde had made an attempt about ten days ago to kill Collins by placing poison in a soft drink which he ordered sent to the oil man's office. Collins became dangerously ill, and a physician, who was summoned immediately, said afterward that he had been near death.

Collins is a brother-in-law of E. W. Marland, oil man. Marland's first wife was Collins' sister. Last April Collins organized a soft drink manufacturing company here and made Hyde secretary-treasurer of it.

Baby Was Bought, Officials Charge

Mann Act Invoked Against Alleged Father, After Strange "Deal."

Kansas City, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A California woman's story of deceit of husband, family and friends in her determination to be a mother, today resulted in the drawing of Mann act charges against Elmer Schade, unfarried father of a month-old baby, whose alleged "sale" to Mrs. Annabel Crouch, of Los Angeles and St. Louis, is being investigated here.

The baby, Mrs. Crouch told authorities, was substituted for child she lost in an operation last January in a Los Angeles, Calif., hospital. Even her husband did not know of the deception, she said.

Schade in the charge ordered filed by William L. Vandeventer, United States District Attorney, is alleged to have transported Hattie Fill, the baby's mother, from Milwaukee, Wis., to Kansas City. The baby was placed in a welfare home.

ROBBERY ADMISSION INVOLVES FOUR MEN

Attack on Oklahoma Bank Messenger Planned Two Weeks in Advance.

$75,000 SUM OBTAINED

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—At the same time that Russell Gibson, of Kansas City, who is charged with participation in a $75,000 robbery here May 20, instituted proceedings today in an effort to regain his freedom, the police made public an alleged confession of Robert Thompson, purporting to implicate Gibson and three other men in the crime.

Besides Gibson, the statement asserts that Thompson, his father, C W. Thompson, of Seminole, and Charles Merritt and James M. ("Cowboy") Hayes, of Kansas City, effected the robbery.

Charles Vowell, youthful messenger of the American First National Bank, was wounded in one arm when he reached for a revolver to protect the money which was snatched from the front seat of the motor car in which he and a negro porter were carrying the bank's money.

Gibson Alleges "Frame Up."

In a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, filed in District Court, Gibson alleges that his arrest was a "frame up" and that Oklahoma City police had bargained with Merritt and Hayes to surrender and testify against him in return for promised immunity. Thompson's purported confession asserts that he, Merritt and Gibson laid plans for the robbery in Kansas City two weeks before it occurred and after Thompson had made preliminary observations of the accustomed movements of the bank messenger. The elder Thompson, it said, later joined the project with the understanding that he would share his son's one-fourth interest in the loot.

After the robbery, the statement said, the men divided the money in an apartment which the elder Thompson had rented with his sister, Mrs. Minnie Rayl, of Hutchinson, Kans., and the Thompsons tucked their share under cushions in Mrs. Rayl's car.

Money, identified as having been taken in the robbery, was found in Mrs. Rayl's motor car when she was arrested a short time after the robbery at Hutchinson. Mrs. Rayl is at liberty under bond.

Tells of Shooting in Robbery.

When the men met at the apartment after the robbery, the purported confession states, Hayes informed them that he "had shot some one" and that he thought it was a negro porter who was in Vowell's car.

"Hayes told us he had shot someone" the statement said, "and thought it was the negro, and he thought he had shot him in the kidneys, and we all said we were sorry."

Witnesses of the robbery related that the robbers stopped in a motor car beside Vowell's car and that one robber leaped out, snatched a bag containing the money from the front seat of the messenger's car and shot Vowell through one arm as Vowell reached for a revolver. The robbers fled in their car.

INQUIRY SPOTLIGHT TOUCHES AIR FIRM

Yancey and Williams, of Rome Hop Fame, Are Absolved by Inspectors.

HUGE STOCK SALES TOLD

New York, Aug. 16 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The powerful searchlight of the Federal authorities, which has been used so effectively during the last few days in exposing alleged bucket shops, tipster sheets and sellers of fake stocks, focused today on the Airvia Corporation, of this city.

This is the company of which Lewis A. Yancey and Roger A. Williams, of Rome flight fame, were officers, being vice president and president, respectively, before their memorial flight to the continent.

When the dust of postal inspectors, who were acting under orders from Assistant United States Attorney George J. Mintzer, had cleared away, four company offices had been visited and every one found therein subpensed to appear at the Federal Building for questioning.

These included the Airvia Corporation, Hadley & Co., the Howland Co., and the Coastal Airways, Inc.

Former Convict Is Head, Claim.

It is claimed by Mintzer that the operating head of both Airvia and the Hadley Co. is Arthur Howard Montgomery, said to have served five years in Atlanta for using the mails to defraud. A warrant for his arrest, as well as for the arrest of Gerald Tiffany, Montgomery's alleged partner, will be forthcoming tomorrow, Mintzer announced.

From the books and records seized in the raids, Mintzer said that he had discovered the Hadley Co. had sold 35,000 shares of Airvia, class "A" stock, for between $8 and $12 a share, under false pretenses. These pretenses, Mintzer continued, were included in literature put out by the Howland concern and claimed exorbitant assets and volume of business.

He also said it was to be distinctly understood that Williams and Yancey were in no way connected with the scheme, having resigned shortly after returning to this country. At the same time they took office, it is charged, Williams stipulated that no stock in the company was to be sold for three years.

Owner of Stock Mysterious.

After questioning several officers of the Airvia Corporation, Mintzer said that of 200,000 shares of class "A" stock, 80,000 was owned by a mysterious "John J. Bromley," who also owned all the class "B" stock amounting to 100,000 shares.

None of the officers of the company, including Capt. James A. Stader, president, who has been with the company only two weeks, know who Bromley was. This state of affairs, Mintzer pointed out, is strange in view of the fact that only stock belonging to Bromley was sold by Hadley & Co.

According to the secretary of the company, Charles B. Ramsgate, $8,000 has been taken in by the company for transportatoin since it has been operating, approximately three weeks. It has two planes, seating twelve persons each, which make daily trips to Boston and return.

The 35,000 shares of stock sold at $8 to $12 a share amount to $350,000, Mintzer pointed out, against which is the comparatively small sum of $8,000. The literature about the Airvia Corporation, as read by Mintzer, claims a total annual revenue of $2,430,000 is possible if the planes are operated to full capacity. Ramsgate said this figure "was ridiculous."

Girl, Clad in Bath Costume, Is Bride

aPris, Aug. 16 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Eyewitnesses thought a scene in some film extravaganza was being enacted yesterda yat Antibes on the Riviera when the local city hall was invaded by a dripping wet band of men and women, clad only in bathing suits. Straight from their morning dip in the sea they had come. When a youthful couple at their head announced to the solemn officials that they wanted to be married then and there supefaction was complete.

The mayor was in his office. A man of the world, he took the situation calmly. When he had verified the couple's papers and satisfied himself that all formalities had been respected, he decided that there was nothing in the code to warrant a refusal to marry the couple standing before him in their bathing suits.

So this was how, according to l'Intransigeant, an American girl from Kansas City, Hilda Von Herrlich, became the bride of a subject of modern Turkey, Maurice Chalom. The happy couple returned with their wedding guests to spend the first hour of their honeymoon in the sea.

Mystery Airplane Is Still Untested

Lieut. Williams Spends His Time Away From Craft; Time Is Short.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 16 (N.Y.W.N.S.)—A persistent wind from the north caused Lieut. Al Williams to lose another day which might have been devoted to trials of the Mercury, small winged and big-powered monoplane which he hopes to enter in the international speed race at Cowes, September 6.

Lieut. Williams employed his time away from the plane today, though the mechanicians spent considerable time in keying it up.

As the time when Lieut Williams and the Mercury must leave this country, if they are to engage in the race, is getting very short, it is likely that some method will be found to hold the tests regardless of weather conditions.

Drowned Bride Slain, Is Verdict of Coroner

Baraboo, Wis., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Coroner F. E. Tryon, of Sauk County, today said Mrs. James Parillo, Chicago bride of five days, who was drowned in Devils Lake August 8, was slain. The body showed bad bruise on the temple, her skull was fractured and she was a prospective mother.

Frank B. Moss, district attorney, said there was a possibility the woman may have fallen from the boat, struck her head and was drowned. No inquest will be held for two or three days, he said, while authorities continue to search for her husband who disappeared with her.

GIRL KILLING CLEWS ARE GIVEN IN VAIN

Six Men Held as Officers Run Down Maze of Leads in Kidnaping.

TAM O'SHANTER FOUND

Minneapolis, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—An over-abundance of clues poured in on police, who scrambled through a maze of leads tonight in an almost frantic manhunt for the slayer of 12-year-old Dorothy Aune, but none of them apparently had brought detectives much nearer solution of the crime.

Six of 21 men taken into custody for questioning as to their movements last Tuesday, the day the little victim was kidnaped, attacked and then strangled to death, were still held in jail without charge tonight although officers admitted their questioning developed little important information.

Tentacles of the case stretched outside the city today for the first time as a dock worker in Duluth confessed the slaying and then immediately repudiated his story, and an automobile was found at Hopkins, ten miles west of here, containing a gunnysack, some heavy twine, a wig and a torn piece of blue cloth.

Confession Disregarded.

Both Minneapolis and Duluth police disregarded the dock worker's confession as the man apparently was irresponsible, but local officers planned to question the owner of the car located at Hopkins. He was picked up there Thursday night on a charge of driving while drunk and is held in the city jail.

When the child-victim's body was found Wednesday morning in a dark spot in South Minneapolis, her hands and feet were bound with heavy twine and she was wrapped in two blood-stained gunnysacks.

Of the six men still held in jail tonight three are brothers, who operate a shoe store near the Aune home. One was questioned all night by detectives, but held consistently to his story that he knew nothing of the crime.

Two other clues, which authorities hoped might develop some trail to the killer, was the finding of the little girl's tam o'shanter in the street a short distance from her home, and the story of two women that they heard screams coming from a vacant lot nearby the night of the child's kidnaping.

Shows Route, Belief.

Officers believed the finding of the hat showed the route taken by the girl's slayer after the kidnaping, while the story of the cries connected perfectly with their theory that Dorothy had been held prisoner in some hiding place Tuesday night before her strangled body was tossed from an automobile early Wednesday morning.

While police pressed their search for the slayer, the grief-stricken parents of Dorothy made preparations for her funeral tomorrow, with indications that one of the largest crowds in recent history would attend the services. Members of Dorothy's Sunday school class will be pallbearers.

Hearing on Ships' Burning Is Begun

Cancellation of Permit to Halt Their Destruction Is Asked.

The office of the District engineer of the United States Army yesterday began a hearing upon the petition of Walter R. Wilson requesting that the Western Marine Salvage Co.'s permit for burning 200 war-time vessels in Mallows Bay be canceled.

In his petition to the Secretary of War, Wilson set forth that the destroying of the ships in the bay was causing damage to his property which lies adjacent to the area and that the submerged hulls of the burned ships were obstructing the free navigation of the bay.

Both the salvage company and the defendant were represented at the hearing. The District engineer's office reserved decision at the request of the defendant's counsel until such a time as it can submit expert opinion as to the damage being done to its client's property. The salvage company has already destroyed 150 of the 200 ships in the bay, which is about 5 miles below Quantico on the Maryland side of the Potomac River. The remaining 50 ships are expected to be burned within a year if the permit is not suspended.

FIRE AGAIN SWEEPS FORT WORTH CHURCH

Educational Building Razed at Fundamentalist Institution.

DR. J. F. NORRIS ABSENT

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Fire today again swept through properties of the First Baptist Church here of which Dr. J. Frank Norris, noted fundamentalist, is pastor, destroying its educational building.

The blaze was caused by a spark from an acetylene torch with which workmen were cutting away steel girders from the ruins of the church's auditorium destroyed by fire last January. Several times before firemen have been called to extinguish flames in the building from the same cause.

Seven companies of firemen battled for more than an hour to keep the fire from spreading. A filling station nearby added to the danger. Employes of a nearby four-story building were forced to flee when smoke poured into their offices.

In 1912, the First Baptist Church was destroyed by fire. Dr. Norris was indicted and tried on charges of arson in connection with the blaze, but, after a bitter court trial, he was acquitted.

The structure was rebuilt, but was razed again by flames the first of this year, while Dr. Norris was visiting in Austin, Tex. After the embers had cooled, city investigators said they found several cans believed to have contained gasoline. The origin of the fire, however, never was decided. The educational building was damaged by the January blaze.

The church's pastor repeatedly has charged that threats have been made against his life and the property of his church as a result of vigorous campaigns he has conducted against so-called vice and criminal elements in Texas.

Dr. Norris was before the public eye two years ago after he shot and killed D. E. Chipps, wealthy Fort Worth lumberman, in his study at the church building. His trial was transferred to Austin on a change of venue, and after sensational testimony was introduced, he was acquitted. The pastor claimed Chipps had threatened his life.

No estimate of today's loss had been made. Dr. Norris is in Wisconsin with his family on a vacation.

Jeweler Is Tortured; $20,000 Gems Taken

Baltimore, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Jewels worth $20,000 were stolen from the office safe of Raymond Hughes, diamond merchant, while he and his wife were held prisoners in their home, Hughes reported to police today.

He said two young men bound him and Mrs. Hughes to beds and held lighted matches near his face until he revealed the safe combination. Then one stood guard while the other went to the office in a downtown building. When Hughes telephoned to police they found the safe open and empty. Hughes recognized his captors as men who came to the office last week to have a diamond appraised.

PRESIDENT LEAVES FOR RAPIDAN CAMP

Hoover to Vary His Usual Week-End by Trip to Madison.

GALA DAY IS SCHEDULED

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover left the White House late yesterday for a week-end of relaxation at his Virginia mountain fishing camp. The usual quiet program of his stay will be broken by his attendance today at a celebration at the nearby town of Madison in appreciation of his selection of the locality as the scene of his vacation trips.

The Chief Executive and a large party of guests who accompanied him from Washington by automobile for the week-end will motor this morning to Madison, 15 miles from the camp. At the celebration there Gov. Byrd of Virginia will present to Hoover in an address the gratitude of Madison County and of Virginia over the President's choice of the region for his fishing preserve.

President to Speak.

Hoover will respond with a brief speech and then will return to his camp.

The people of Madison County, however, plan to make a day of it and the afternoon's program will include an old-fashioned Southern barbecue and a series of athletic contests. Preparations for the event have been in progress for several weeks and the Chief Executive is to be received in true presidential fashion. A field artillery piece has been secured to fire a presidential saluta, a band will play "Hail to the Chief," and the famous Richmond Blues, at the formal order of Gov. Byrd, will be present to act as a guard of honor.

Large Party of Guests.

The guests of the President for the week-end included Assistant Secretary Jahncke of the Navy Department; Assistant Secretary MacCracken, of the Commerce Department, and Mrs. MacCracken; Retiring Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher to Italy; Representative Fort, of New Jersey, secretary of the Republican national committee; James Logan, of New York City; Capt. Allan Buchanan, the President's naval aid, and Mrs. Buchanan; George Akerson and Lawrence Richey, secretaries to the President, and Lieut. Comdr. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician.

At the fishing camp the President was awaited by Mrs. Hoover and their son, Allan, who have now spent the last two weeks there so that the latter might obtain the rest necessary to complete recuperation from a recent attack of stomach trouble.

Madison, Va., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—President Hoover, accompanied by a party of guests, most of whom will come here tomorrow with him to attend a celebration in his honor, arrived at his mountain camp tonight after a leisurely trip from Washington.

Rum-Laden Ship Taken to Norfolk

British Schooner Is Seized by Coast Guard; Left Bermuda August 11.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The British schooner Jupie, out of Bermuda and liquor laden, was captured this morning by the Coast Guard patrol boat CC-194 off the Virginia coast and is being brought to the section base here.

The schooner, an oil burner, well known, it is said, in Coast Guard patrol circles, left Bermuda on August 11 with approximately 900 cases of rum aboard ostensibly bound for St. Pierre, the port of the island of Miquelon in the St. Lawrence River.

In the absence of Commander L. J. Kerr, commandant of the patrol squadron, Commander C. P. Howell, chief of staff to Capt P. H. Scott, commandant of Norfolk division, went to Section Base 8 along with customs men, to board the incoming vessel. They will make an inspection and tally of the liquor in her cargo before returning it over to the customs for disposition and the crew over to Federal authorities.

The name of the schooner, although she is listed in the current issue of the New York Maritime Register as in transit from port to port, does not appears in Lloyds Register.

Bigamist, Faced by Wives In Court, Pleads Guilty

Decorator Blames "His Too Sociable Nature" for Marrying Girls in Various Cities; Three Wives Relate Romances; Mother-in-Law Charges Larceny.

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Samuel Bagun, 35, interior decorator of Cleveland, Ohio, today pleaded guilty to bigamy charges after hearing three of his four wives list his marital ventures in police court. Sentence was deferred pending trial on another indictment charging him with larceny of a diamond ring from his latest mother-in-law.

Bagun, also known as Burg and Berger, was arrested yesterday in New York as he was about to take his fifth wife, police said. Because of the larceny charge he was extradited to this city.

Bagun smiled in police court as three of his wives told Magistrate Oswald of their romances. The court was informed wife No. 1, known as Mrs. Stella Berger, was the only one not present. Bagun was said to have married her in Denver, Col., in May, 1915.

Wife No. 2, Mrs. Gertrude Befold Berger, of New York, told the court she married Bagun October 11, 1925, in Los Angeles. She said he left her before their child was born.

Mrs. Rose Katz, of Washington, D. C., said she married Bagun in Baltimore in December, 1927. Mrs. Beatrice Kuntz Berger, of Philadelphia, said she was wife No. 4 and married Bagun in this city on May 3, 1928. Mrs. Bessie Kuntz, mother of Beatrice, charged Bagun with larceny of her diamond ring valued at $1,000.

"Loneliness and my sociable nature got me into this trouble," Bagun told Magistrate Oswald. "I travel in my work and every time I got in a strange town I got lonesome. When I got lonesome I went out and met a girl and then I didn't stop until I married her."

Doyle Sees Clairvoyant On Future Police Staffs

Author of "Sherlock Holmes" Thinks Psychometrist Could Scent Valuable Clews for Detectives in Mystery Cases—Explains Workings of Such Plan.

London, Aug. 16 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The police station of the future will have a trained clairvoyant on the staff of the detective department, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, spiritualist and creator of "Sherlock Holmes," prophesied in an interview here today.

He drew a picture of the day when a criminal will have to destroy all things used in the commission of a crime or a clairvoyant will "sense" the curse on the article and hand it over to the detectives.

"I think that in every case of a mysterious nature a clairvoyant could be used," said Sir Arthur, adding, "although I do not think anyone could ever be convicted on the knowledge and evidence of a clairvoyant, I think they can find clues where the police can not. The proper term really is psychometrist. The work has nothing to do with spirits. It is entirely connected with the medium's own latent powers.

"I will give you an example of the help that might be given in unraveling a murder mystery." A blood-stained knife is found. You call in a psychometrist who inspects the knife and the scene of the crime. He says to the highly trained detective in charge of the case, 'I have a strong impression of a man with a long black moustache. He's wearing a brown suit.' That gives the detective something to work on, for no matter how skilled he might be, he couldn't possibly have received an idea of the man's appearance from looking at the knife.

"In the arsenic mystery murder I'd have tried this method for clews, although it would be very difficult. There's no doubt that a great many cases have passed into oblivion and have remained profound mysteries, cases in which a psychometrist might have arrived at a clew strong enough to bring the criminal to justice. The clews might have been discovered for, like an aerial bloodhound, the psychometrist follows up the scent. It's perfect folly to allow case after case of murder, or even theft, to pass without trying what could be done in other than ordinary directions."

PANTAGES IS HELD TO SUPERIOR COURT

Theater, Scene of Alleged Attack on Girl, Is Visited at Hearing.

SCREAMS ARE RECALLED

Los Angeles, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Municipal Judge Leonard Wilson today held Alexander Pantages, millionaire theater owner, for trial in Superior Court on charges of attacking 17-year-old Eunice Pringle in his private office a week ago. The judge's decision was given after three days of preliminary hearing.

Pantages was held to answer on two felony counts, the court ruling that "there is sufficient cause to believe the defendant guilty thereof." The theater magnate remained at liberty pending trial, on $25,000 bond. The date of his trial was not set.

In connection with the holding of Pantages, Judge Wilson saw fit to explain that in so doing he was not passing upon the guilt or innocence of the hteater man, except insofar as evidence admissible to legal trial was concerned.

"On account of the prominence of the defendant and the wide publicity which has been given this hearing, the court believes i tproper to describe the nature of the proceedings which have just come to a close," Judge Wilson said in a formal statement from the bench.

Still Presumed Innocent.

"This is a preliminary hearing. The court is not called upon, nor is he permitted to pass upon the guilt or innocence of Mr. Pantages at this time. Nothing said herein should therefore be construed that this point is being finally decided. He is now and will be at all times hereafter until the case is finally submitted to the superior court, clothed with the presumption of innocence. The defendant has elected not to take the witness stand, nor to put on nay defense in his behalf, nor is he required to do so.

W. C. Hale, a prosecution witness, testified today that Pantages gave "strict orders" to a police officer and himself to "keep this thing quiet" following the alleged attack.

Hale appeared as the State's last witness at the preliminary hearing and corroborated the testimony of two other witnesses, Fred Wise and W. L. Gordon, that he saw Pantages struggling with the girl in a small room in the Pantages Theater Building.

Hale said Pantages told him and Police Officer A. L. Courtney "I don't want any publicity," as the two men broke into the private office, scene of the alleged attack, and found the executive.

Doctors Reexamine Girl.

The morning session was halted fifteen minutes early to allow two physicians to reexamine Miss Pringle. The physicians were appointed by the State and defense. Hale was preceded on the stand by Fred Wise, who was cross-examined by the defense on his movements several days prior to the alleged assault, which occurred while the girl claimed she was interviewing Pantages concerning a dancing act she sought to stage.

At the opening of court, Pantages permitted his attorneys to withdraw part of their motion barring the public, and only newspaper men were admitted.

Hale said he was sitting in the theater balcony watching a stage performance when he heard a girl's screams. He ran to a corridor and declared Miss Pringle rushed from a door, "screaming and fell into my arms."

Garb in Disarray, He Says.

The girl's clothing was in disarray, Hale said, and her body was bruised.

"She was screaming: 'Don't let that beast get away,'" he declared.

At the noon adjournment the defense announced it would call one witness, but would not offer rebuttal testimony.

After cross-examination of Hale at the opening of the afternoon session, the defense and prosecution agreed they could not form a clear picture of the witness' movements in the theater, and the court adjourned to the playhouse where Hale was instructed to reenact his dash to Pantages' office.

The court was resumed in the theater corridors. Pantages and Miss Pringle avoided each other as the scene switched from the hallways, where the girl claimed she fled after the attack, to Pantages' private office, in which Miss Pringle said she was assaulted.

VETERANS GUESTS OF CAPITAL TODAY

Blue Ridge Division Comes Here for Its Tenth Annual Reunion.

WILL OPEN TOMORROW

An advance guard of veterans of the Eightieth (Blue Ridge) Division of the World War forces will trickle into Washington today, to be followed tonight and tomorrow by hundreds of former soldiers coming here from Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia to attend their tenth annual reunion since the war. The reunion will be opened formally tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington and ceremonies, meetings and sight-seeing tours will keep the veterans busy for three days until the close of their reunion Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock with a banquet at the Raleigh Hotel.

Headquarters for the reunion already have been opened at the Raleigh and today and tomorrow incoming delegations of veterans will register here and be welcomed by a committee.

The program for the memorial service at Arlington was made public yesterday by E. Clyde Cruit, chairman of the memorial service committee. The service will be opened with music by the Army Band. The Rev. Theodore Beck, a former chaplain of the 160th Infantry Brigade, who was wounded in France, will pronounce the invocation.

The Rev. Edward W. Wallace, another former chaplain of the division, will speak on "Silent Men of Arms" and the Rev. Thomas W. Cooper, in private life an Episcopal rector but during the World War a captain of infantry who won renown as the division's "fighting parson," will pronounce the benediction.

One of the features of the service will be a short address, "Memories," to be made by Lieut. Frank Schoble, jr., who was blinded during the war. Representative Stephen G. Porter, of Pennsylvania, will deliver the principal address.

Singing, the sounding of taps by a bugler and a volley by a firing squad will conclude the services at the Unknown's tomb, and after the placing of a wreath there, the veterans will move down the slope to the tomb of Brig. Gen. Lloyd M. Brett, who led the division's 160th Infantry Brigade in action, there to pay tribute to his memory.

Students Pallbearers At Burial of Comrade

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Fellow football players acted as pallbearers here this morning at funeral rites for Ernest Miller, 17 years old, high school athlete and captain-elect for the 1929 football team, while all members of the squad and Coach G. O. Mullan were honorary escorts.

The church where the services were held was unable to accommodate the mourners, hundreds of whom were high school students. The Rev. Dr. A. M. Gluck referred to the high character and promising outlook for the young man, who was drowned in Opequon Creek near here earlier in week.

Moslems, Jews Riot Again at Wailing Wall

JerusaleJm, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Trouble between Moslems and Jews over the western wall of the temple, commonly known as the Wailing Wall, broke out again today with an invasion by Moslem masses of the lane above the wall.

The Moslems gathered in the Mosque Omar and broke through both the new gate and the old entrance. They were stated to have committed depredations, including robboing the altar and severely beating one or two Jews found there.

BOARD ASSEMBLES DATA ON HOSPITAL

Gallinger Inquiry to Begin When All Information Has Been Classified.

WORK TO BE SPEEDED

Preliminary surveys preparatory to the probe of Gallinger Municipal Hospital by the Board of Public Welfare continued quietly yesterday as members and officials of the board set about the task of rounding up and classifying all available information as to conditions as charged by various individuals and revealed in the series of articles now appearing in The Post.

A voluminous mass of data is already in the hands of the medical committee of the board, of which Dr. George M. Kober and Mrs. Hugh S. Cummings, wife of the Surgeon General of the Army, are the present active members, and these, with the assistance of George S. Wilson, director of the board, expect to have their data in shape within a day or two to provide a definite basis upon which the board as a whole may act.

As soon as the medical committee has its findings properly classified, it is to notify John Joy Edson, chairman of the board, who is awaiting that advice as the signal to call the second special meeting of the board for the purpose of assigning individual members to specific details of the probe. There is a strong likelihood that such call may be made today for a meeting early next week.

It is the purpose of the board to speed up the probe as rapidly as is consistent with thoroughness, the consensus being that the sooner the conditions as described in The Post are remedied, the sooner the District of Columbia can accomplish its announced purpose of maintaining the finest hospital in the nation for the care and treatment of indigent sufferers.

department and said, 'Anybody want to go home for Christmas?' I answered that I did. So the doctor said he would dismiss me if I would sign papers to the effect that I was entirely well. I told him I would sign anything in order to get out of that place. So I signed the papers and was released, although I was far from well."

"My clothes were clean and well pressed when I entered the hospital," he says, "but when the orderly tossed them in the ward so I could dress preparatory to leaving, they were dirty and wrinkled.

"When I was let out I asked the nurse about my wrist watch and other valuables. She told me I would have to come back Monday for them because the nurse who handled the valuables was gone for the day and would not be back until Monday morning. So I left the hospital, weak and weary and looking like a bum."

Within a short time, Politz said he became ill from the influenza again at Williamsport, Pa., and was taken to the hospital.

"Although Williamsport is a small town," he declares, "it has a fine hospital, much better in every way than Gallinger Hospital. I received good treatment in that institution and soon was fully recovered from my attack of flu."

"Gallinger Hospital," he says, "is the worst hospital I was ever in. The conditions existing there are absolutely intolerable. Besides the Williamsport hospital I have been in the North Hudson Hospital at Weehawken, N. J., as a patient. There is absolutely no comparison between the North Hudson and Gallinger Hospitals."

Another one of Mr. Price's articles on conditions at Gallinger Hospital will appear in tomorrow's issue.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S FARE UP TO BOARD

Capital Traction Would Not Object to Order Says Head of Firm.

HANNA CROSS-EXAMINED

effect, so far as the company's return is concerned.

But, Hanna said, if his guess is wrong and the company's revenue is reduced materially thereby he wants the responsibility to rest on the commission so that his company will be entirely free to come before the commission again and ask for higher adult fares to make up the difference.

The hearings yesterday were marked by the cross-examination of Hanna by Clayton and by questions put to the traction president by Harleigh H. Hartman, vice chairman of the commission.

In the course of Clayton's examination of Hanna there was a sharp verbal tilt, in which Hanna accused Clayton of blocking merger of the car lines. Question and answer had dealt with the advantages of rerouting cars on Fifteenth, Fourteenth, New York and Pennsylvania avenues, so as to provide for the routing of Capital Traction cars from Pennsylvania avenue up Fourteenth street.

Clayton asked if the Capital Traction Co. is now prepared to make any changes. Hanna said, "It is not."

"Would you make them if the companies were merged?" queried Clayton.

Hanna said yes, that then changes could be made which would be advantageous, and Clayton asked if he believed a merger will take place.

The memory of Clayton and his assistants as the Gibraltar against which the Harley Wilson merger plan had dashed itself to pieces was too much for Hanna, and he was sharp and incisive as he replied, "If it had not been for you, unification would not have been held up for such a long time." Clayton accepted the indictment with apparent enjoyment, declaring, "Then it is up to me to make good," and there seemed imminent a verbal battle which was forestalled by Commissioner Hartman, who ordered stricken from the record Hanna's reference to Clayton.

Bus Company's Exclusion Hit.

Clayton attacked the contention of the traction representatives against inclusion of the bus company as a party to the present case, and Hanna declared that street car and bus traffic were not the same. Hanna was fencing sharp and fast, recognizing Clayton as an opponent, and hedged his every answer, going back always to the fundamental principles on which his company based its case whenever he felt that he had been crowded into a corner.

Clayton hoist Hanna on the petard of his own testimony on the question of uniform fares when he asked if the Capital Traction would approve uniform street car fares if the fares of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. were reduced.

"No," said Hanna with positiveness.

"Then it's a one-way proposition, isn't it? It works only when fares are to be increased?" Clayton persisted.

Commissioner Hartman suggested that there was developing an argument and Clayton agreed, content with the record, and passed on to other questons.

Fare Demand Subject of Quiz.

Clayton's examination dealt with the contention of the Capital Traction Co. that it must have increased fares in order to pay its usual 7 per cent dividend.

Commissioner Hartman administered the coup de grace to this line of questioning and the bland answers from the traction head when, some time later, he asked Hanna to state why it was that his company had to have a higher rate of return than the rate which was provided as the maximum rate of return which should be earned by the steam railroads in the transportation act, enacted by Congress and administered by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Hanna said the cost of money and the credit of his company, were the factors which impelled his company to demand, as its right, a 7 per cent minimum return on its valuation, although Congress had decided that 6 per cent was the maximum which the Interstate Commerce Commission should permit steam roads to earn.

Credit Impaired, Claim.

The credit of his company would be impaired, Hanna said, if it earned less than 7 per cent return, inasmuch as its "credit depends on its earnings and the ratio of earnings to capital stock as well as to its entire value."

"Earnings under 7 per cent would impair the ability of our company to borrow money," Hanna said.

Replying to further questions from Commissioner Hartman, Hanna emphasized the importance of the market value of the Capital Traction stock and bonds as proof of his contention, although a few days earlier, in the course of the hearing, he had deprecated the market value or the pertinence of these selfsame securities.

Again, in response to other questions from Hartman, the Capital Traction president sought to temper his answer to the winds of the question, declaring that his company had to have a high rate of return and a very good financial condition in order to enable it to get additional funds for "expansion," although all his previous testimony was to the effect that the business of his company was steadily dwindling away and no equipment had been bought for years and the compnay did not intend to buy any, but was trying, as best it could, to conserve its present resources and investment.

Old Days Recalled.

Hartman took Hanna back to the days shortly after horses had been abandoned as the motive power of street cars, when the white painted "U. S. Mail" car and other "trailers" were in use, and asked if the company had allowed any depreciation for its equipment since those days. Hanna said no, there had been no depreciation allowed for since the old "single truck" trailers and motor cars had been charged off. A few days ago he said that his company has not bought any new equipment for more than a decade, although he insisted that what it had was good and should be accepted on a cost-plus basis in its valuation, on which it is basing its claim for higher fares.

Commissioner Hartman introduced a series of maps and tables showing street car lines and fare in other cities. Earlier the company had introduced similar maps and tables in support of its claims for higher fares.

Hartman dissected the company exhibits regarding other cities, asking numerous questions which Hanna could not answer. Hartman phrased his questions "is it not true" that this and that factor in other cities were different from Washington. He asked if the company's exhibits allowed for two electric locomotives purchased by the Buffalo company, if the cost figures given by the Capital Traction made allowance for operation of 9.28 miles of subways in Rochester, and many other questions. He apparently had more information than the company had about its own exhibits, and Hanna either said he could not answer or that he would give an answer later if the commission desired him to do so. Hartman brushed these offers aside, saying Hanna could if he wished, but it was not mandatory.

Taxation Rate Thought High.

Other questions were directed at taxation, but Hanna said that while he did not know the details Hartman asked him, he believed it was true that the taxation rate of the Capital Traction was very high because of its low bonded indebtedness in comparison with its capitalization.

Hanna had chewed many unlighted cigars and was not at his best as the hearings closed for the day. When Commissioner Hartman, who was presiding, asked whether the company's case was "all in," Hanna looked down the table toward G. Thomas Dunlop, general counsel, and George E. Hamilton, lawyer, former president and now chairman of the board of directors of the Capital Traction, and there ensued a company huddle, at the conclusion of which Dunlop formally addressed the commission to ask if certain other evidence might be offered later.

The company claim for rate of return seemed to have been attacked, he said, and in view of the question from the commission he pointed out that the fare asked for by the company was less than 5 per cent which, in view of the United States Supreme Court, he said, is much less than a "fair" rate of return.

There were some other things said, of no especial point, whereupon the Capital Traction closed its case, except for rebuttal evidence. Presiding Chairman Hartman called on the Washington Railway & Electric Co. to be ready to present its case on Monday morning and adjourned the hearings until 10 o'clock Monday morning.

ELMER S. HUCKINS.

CHIEF OF MYSTERY CONCERN ARRESTED

Head of Firm Paying 26 Per Cent Annually Held on Fraud Count.

LAWYER DENIES CHARGE

Milwaukee, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Elmer S. Huckins, head of a mysterious business which reputedly pays dividends of 26 per cent annually, today surrendered to Federal authorities who have charged him with using the mails to defraud.

He was placed under $25,000 bond and ordered to appear for preliminary hearing August 26, with the understanding that there will be another adjournment until September 9.

Huckins today again refused to divulge the nature of the business he heads and, which is purported to have drawn an estimated $3,000,000 in investments, without solicitation, from hundreds of persons in the Middle West. A report that he is engaged in a "cigar business" has been persistently denied by Huckins and his son and associate, George Huckins, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Huckins' attorney, Walter J. Barngrover, of Cedar Rapids, appeared before United States Commissioner Harry L. Kellogg with his client and asked for an immediate hearing. The court demurred and fixed the bail at $25,000.

The commissioner agreed to accept Huckins' $100,000 home at Hancock, Wis., in lieu of cash bond. Huckins, in custody of a deputy marshal, was then taken to Oshkosh, Wis., where they were met by the former's wife, Mrs. Amelia Huckins, who was to sign the joint bond.

Attorney Barngrover deprecated the Government's cause and called the Huckins' enterprise "just as honorable and legitimate as any in Milwaukee."

Barngrover said his client had not attempted to evade service of the Federal warrant and that he immediately communcated with Federal authorities upon learning the status of the case.

The Fauquier Springs was a well known hostelry during the Civil War and up through the late nineties.

CHINA LAYS TREATY RUPTURE TO RUSSIA

Minister at Washington Is Reported as Told to Notify Powers.

CHANG MASSES TROOPS

London, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Reports from Nanking tonight were that the Chinese minister at Washington had been instructed to notify signatories of the Kellogg anti-war pact that Russia had invaded Chinese territory in Manchuria.

This action by Foreign Minister C. T. Wang followed repeated unofficial reports during the last few days of actual conflicts with casualties between the opposing border patrols who have been massed on the Manchurian-Siberian front for weeks since the seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway by the Chinese.

The Russian demand that Soviet Railway officials be reinstated as a condition to opening peace negotiations has been refused and each government has proclaimed a "firm stand" against the alleged aggressive attitude of the other. As a result the dispute, which recently seemed on the way to peaceful settlement with the encouragement of the powers, tonight was approaching the status of an open quarrel with all negotiations suspended or broken off.

Wang Denies Dissension.

Additional Chinese soldiers were reported on the way to the frontier and Minister Wang was quoted as saying that the Nanking government and Chang Hsueh Liang, who inherited the mantle of "War Lord" in Manchuria from his father, Chang Tso Lin, were in complete agreement.

The Soviet government has claimed that nearly 3,000 of its citizens formerly employed on the Chinese Eastern Railway have been deprived of opportunity to obtain work and that more than 1,500 have been arrested by order of the Chinese director of the railway. They accuse the Chinese of hurriedly filling the vacated posts with their own nationals and last night Vice Commissar of Foreign Affairs L. M. Karakhan gave official notice that the Soviet government would not be bound by any contracts or agreements concerning the railway made after its seizure.

New Clashes Reported.

The railway had been operated by a joint directorate under a treaty made in 1924. The Chinese expelled the Russian officials on the charge that they had used their commercial positions for political purposes.

Renewed alarming aspects of the crisis were reported in Reuter's dispatches from Mukden, Manchurio, today. Other sources related continued clashes, although apparently of minor character, along the border between Russians and Chinese and Russians and white Russian emigres.

A Reuter's Mukden dispatch said Chang Hseuh Liang had ordered 60,000 Fengtien troops to the Siberian border, half to be commanded by Marshal Wang Shih Chen at Manchuli and half to be stationed in the east at Suifenho (Pogranichnaya) under Gen. Ho Yu Kwan.

It was said that 300 Russian marines who had occupied two small towns on the lower Sungari River had been driven off, six Russians and two Chinese dying in the conflict.

SPOKANE AVIATORS HOVER IN WYOMING

Spokane Sun God today started Eastward across the continent toward New York, where it is expected to hover long enough to refuel and then turn West again.

The airplane, manned by Pilots N. B. Mamer and Art Walker, of Spokane, planned to refuel at Rock Springs, Wyo. The fliers hope not only to fly twice across the continent without stopping, but by means of refueling, to set a new world's endurance flight record.

The Sun God left Spokane at 5:58 p. m. yesterday. Its departure was marked by elaborate ceremonies, including its formal naming. The christening was performed by Mrs. Evelyn Pancher, widow of Maj. Jack Pancher, well-known National Guard aviator, who lives here. A large group of Flathead Indians lent color to the ceremonies and it was in consideration of their tribal history that the plane was named the Sun God. Chief Garry of the tribe pronounced a special blessing on the plane and flight.

Flying by way of Portland and the Sacramento Valley the plane reached San Francisco this morning at 5:25 o'clock. It slowed up and was refueled twice, takng on 80 gallons of gasoline. It had dropped a note telling of motor trouble last night, but there was no indication today of such trouble. Three refuelings were asked at San Francisco, but only two were taken, which was believed to have accounted for the request for more gasoline at Rock Springs.

was essential to the security of the United States, in speaking today before the Latin-American round table at the institute.

"Recent improved political conditions, among the Caribbean countries," he said, "are due largely to our influence exerted for peace and for constitutional procedure.

Dr. T. Deydil Vaca, of Philadelphia, former representative of the Nicaraguan constitutional government at Washington, and in recent years champion of the Nicaraguan Liberal party in the United States, criticized the United States' intervention policy in Nicaragua.

"It is apparent after scanning the record," he asserted, "that a deliberate, relentless determination to hold Nicaragua at any cost is the fixed motive of our conduct there. Explanations of any sort are only accessories after the fact."

The question of whether the proposed deep waterway to connect the Great Lakes with the Atlantic Ocean should be by the St. Lawrence or by the New York State route and Hudson River was debated this morning.

W. L. Harding, former governor of Iowa, advocating the St. Lawrence route, contended that a canal across New York State for the purpose of deep-sea shipping will not work. It could be dug, he said, but it is not feasible or practicable for the purpose desired.

Edward C. Carrington, chairman of the Great Lakes-Hudson Waterways Association, argued that the St. Lawrence project is economically unsound, that the engineering difficulty attached to the St. Lawrence project is well-nigh insurmountable and that political and international complications render the construction of the St. Lawrence route impracticable.

KELLOGG PACT SET ASIDE IN FAR EAST

Both Russia and China Are Accused of Invading Other's Land.

POWERS IN QUANDARY

of seeing China retain control of the Chinese Eastern Railway and openly disregard Russian threats.

Reports from Nanking that the Nationalist government had instructed Dr. C. C. Wu, the Chinese Minister here, to protest to the signatories of the Kellogg pact against Russia's invasion of Manchuria and consequent violation of the pact, reached the State Department unofficially during the early afternoon hours. Meanwhile, however, both Secretary of State Stimson and Undersecretary Cotton had left for their week-end vacations.

Mr. Stimson said the press dispatches made the situation look awkward, but added that he had no official confirmation of the border clashes and other incidents reported in late cables. The Secretary added that he was optimistic over the situation. Dr. Wu had received no message from his government up to a late hour yesterday.

Await Word From China.

Presumably an appeal by China to the United States against Russian violation of the Kellogg pact would be transmitted in due course from the State Department here to other governments, if the Chinese make this request. But the State Department will be disinclined to press the matter pending official word from its own representatives as to latest reported border clashes.

The Department would much prefer to interpret border clashes or invasions of Chinese territory as incidents which do not actually involve a violation of the Kellogg pact. To admit that the pact is being violated would be to admit that it has failed in its initial effort toward preservation of peace and if there is any way that the developments in Manchuria can be construed so as not to admit failure of the pact, it is probable that such construction will be applied here. There will be the danger of more flagrant and extensive violations to cope with, according to present indications. But even in case of actual war there is nothing which the powers can do under the Kellogg pact, as that pact provides no machinery for coping with the consequences of any outbreak of war.

Committee Reports $1,000 Subscribed of $10,000 Needed for Event.

AID IS URGED BY SMITH

Dissatisfaction with the results of the campaign to raise $10,000 to defray the expenses of the President's Cup regatta here September 13 and 14 was expressed by the general committee in charge of the event after reports from team workers showed that little more than $1,000 has been subscribed since Wednesday morning, when the drive opened.

Conrad C. Smith, commodore of the Chesapeake and Potomac Boat Association and general chairman of the regatta, expressed fear that the goal would not be reached within the week allotted to the campign. He called attention to the fact that trade and civic organizations have indorsed the project.

"If these men see the regatta as a forward stride for the National Capital, certainly it is not too much to expect the city to raise the small amount that is required to make it a success," Smith said. "The business men of the community, who know the value of advertising, can readily see that this event will have an advertsing appeal to a class of people all over the country who could be reached in no other way."

L. Gordon Leech, secretary of the power boat association, announced last night that John J. Cornwell has been autho ized by the Caille Motor Co., of Detroit, of which he is Washington representative, to present a cup to the committee to be used as a trophy in the outboard events of the regatta.

OIL TANK ERECTION IN ARLINGTON HIT

30 Residents Appear at Zoning Board Meeting to Oppose Permit.

WOULD COST $50,000

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Vigorous protest was launched by Capt. Crandall Mackey and more than 30 residents living on Mackey's Hill to the application filed by C. H. Greathouse for the Sun Oil Co., of Philadelphia, for a permit for the erection of storage tanks for fuel oil and gasoline and administration buildings before the zoning commission at its meeting last night at the courthouse.

According to the permit, buildings to be erected would cost more than $50,000.

Capt. Mackey declared that oil companies are no benefit to Arlington County.

"If they want to be located in Arlington County why don't they go where there are already several oil storage companies and where there are no residences," Mackey said.

"This plant located in Rosslyn, whre there nowis located the Lee Highway Service Station and continuing down to the river, will make conditions impossible to pass through," Mackey declared.

"Those favoring it say it will bring revenue to Arlington County to the extent of $100,000. I say it will ruin property to the extent of $300,000.

"There is today no water on Mackey's Hill and this oil company allowed to locate here would be just another great fire hazard.

"I am not here as counsel for any one but as a resident of this county and in this particular section for 30 years."

Dr. J. N. Roberts, another resident in the proposed section, declared that the three 25,000-barrel tanks would be almost at his front door.

Chairman Gosnell announced that the commission would take no action at this meeting and requested that a petition be drawn and signed by those opposing the project.

Over strong protest presented by Robert N. Anderson, president of the Lyon Village Citizens Association, the comission, on motion of Commissioner Robert H. Forman, approved the application of Mrs. Marie Clark Bell for a permit to erect a gasoline filling station on the Lee highway opposite Lyon Village at the intersection of Rucker and Virginia avenues.

Anderson later announced that he will appear bfore the county board of supervisors at its meeting Monday and file a protest against the issuing of the permit by the supervisors.

INSECTS DESTROY VIRGINIA PEACHES

Moth and Curculio Reduce Albemarle Shipments by Two-Thirds.

GROWERS BATTLE PEST

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 16.—With the admission by one prominent fruit grower that the Albemarle peach crop is "an awful failure," some orchardists predict that the county is faced with the probability of a permanent crippling of the peach shipping industry unless immediate and drastic action is taken against the depredations of the Oriental peach moth and the curculio.

A survey of the recent season discloses that Albemarle was slated to ship between 500 and 600 carloads of peaches—a bumper crop. It is now estimated that 200 cars went to the markets. Of this quantity a little over half went from the Crozet section, at the foot of the Blue Ridge. Crozet had anticipated between 300 and 400 cars. A number of growers did not pick. Others were forced to sacrifice their peaches at roadstands for any price they could get.

It is judged that not more than 50 per cent of the total crop is classified as No. 1, and that some of these are thought to have proved wormy after shipping. The number of culls in the orchards was described by F. E. Merrifield, president of the Piedmont Fruit Growers Association, as "appalling." In brief, the county has undergone a loss in profits of several hundred thousand dollars. This is directly traceable to the work of the two insects.

To what extent each of the pests ravaged orchards seems to be a matter of speculation. C. T. O'Neill, of Crozet, states that the curculio could be called to account for 75 per cent of the loss, with the moth playing a relatively inferior part. He asserts that a large part of the shortage could have been prevented by early spraying with lead mixture. A number of orchardists, it seems, have been omitting the lead from their spraying concoctions because it has a tendency to "burn" the foliage. Mr. O'Neill's advice is to kill the bug and let the foliage go.

Opposed to Mr. O'Neill's view is the opinion of another fruit man that the moth is the worse of the two. The tactics of the two insects appear to be different. The curculio, well and unfavorably known by growers for some years, "stings" the peach, works under the skin and lays its eggs, which in turn hatch into worms. Its presence can be detected in the fruit by a sort of resinous substance which exudes from the peach. The moth, which made its appearance here season before last, first attacks the twig before the fruit has been borne. It works into the twig, where it is said to exist on sap until the coming of the fruit. From there it goes through the stem into the peach. On the outside the peach is apparently unblemished.

The most effective means of destroying the moth is thought to be by burying defective fruit and burning it with quick lime. For the purpose of studying this insect Albemarle growers are requesting the establishment of a Government experiment station in the county.

Bible School Held Crime Deterrent

Dr. A. L. Lathem Urges Founding of More Institutions by Churches.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 16.—Urging the establishment of Bible schools in churches, Dr. A. L. Lathem, of Chester, Pa., founder of the Bible school movement nineteen years ago, stated today that the "best way to keep the younger people straight is to go back home and establish a Bible school in the local church.

Dr. Lathem's address was given before the Bible conference group at Massanetta Springs. Included in the day's program were Dr. William Evans and Dr. Hiram Foulker. Following the evening service Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lupton were hosts at a reception given in honor of the speakers in the Fannie Lupton Memorial building.

"The average criminal," said Dr. Lathem in his address, "is 18 years of age. At this stage in life the young man or woman is more apt to be influenced by his surroundings than at any other time in life. The devil will get the children at this age unless they are grounded in the ways of God. I can not too strongly urge the establishment of Bible schools in the individual church."

Appearing on tomorrow's program will be Dr. P. W. Philpot, of Chicago, who will speak at the morning and evening services.

Poolroom Banned In Morgan County

West Virginia Court's Ruling Is Upheld by State's Attorney General.

Special to The Washington Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Poolrooms in Morgan County, of which this town is the county seat, apparently are doomed as a result of an attorney general's ruling, received here today, upholding the county court's refusal to issue licenses. The licenses were denied by the court July 1 after complaint had been made against some of the poolrooms and the court took the view that their operation was not desirable.

A ruling was asked of the attorney general as to the ultimate authority in issuing licenses after one poolroom had secured a license from the State tax commissioner's office in Charleston. The county court was upheld. The license issued from the tax office was recalled and fees sent to Charleston by three poolroom operators for licenses were returned.

So far as known, this county is the only one in the State where poolrooms are not operated. The two-man county court, President Ward M. Dawson and M. A. Vanorsdale, stand adamant in refusing the licenses.

BAD CHECKS CAUSE ALEXANDRIA ARREST

Man Caught at Station as Instruments for $24 Prove Worthless.

OUT OF WORK, IS CLAIM

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

An alleged "check flasher," who, the police claim, attempted to defraud two Alexandrians of $24, and was attempting to make his escape from the city, was arrested by Police Sergt. Lawrence Padgett at the union passenger station shortly after noon yesterday.

The man, George C. Charles, is being held at police headquarters and will be arraigned today before Justice W. S. Snow on two charges of passing worthless checks. The police claim Charles cashed a check for $20 at the store of John McCuen & Co., 1121 King street, and an investigation a few minutes later at a local bank disclosed that the check was worthless. McCuen made a report to police headquarters and Sergt. Padgett was assigned to the case. Padgett went to the home of Mrs. Ruth Bohraus, where Charles has been rooming, and found that the man had paid his room rent with a check for $4, taken his effects and left. The check was drawn on the same bank as the one cashed by McCuen, and also proved worthless.

Sergt. Padgett then went to the union station, where he found Charles about to board a train, and placed him under arrest, identifying him from the description given by Mrs. Bohraus. Charles admitted having passed the checks, according to the police, saying he was out of work and badly in need of money. Several blank checks of the same bank named in the alleged worthless ones were found on Charles' person when he was searched at police headquarters.

Thomas had been serving a sentence of three months in Baltimore on an assault charge, and upon the expiration of his sentence was rearrested on a warrant sworn out by Capt. W. W. Campbell.

A DAILY DOZEN

Upon the office wall of a Baltimore business man is an attractively framed motto which should be engraved upon the heart and memory of every youth who expects to be worth while.

It is called a "Daily Dozen" and it asks Divine help in trying to learn each day the following things:

The Value of Time
The Success of Perseverance
The Pleasure of Working
The Dignity of Simplicity
The Worth of Character
The Power of Kindness
The Influence of Example
The Obligation of Duty
The Wisdom of Economy
The Virtue of Patience
The Improvement of Talent
The Joy of Originating

A sermon could be built around each one of these dozen phrases and combined they make the best sermon, if properly considerd, that the writer has ever known.

Cut these out and place them where you can see them every day. They will do you more good than any physical exercise you take.

TARIFF VALUATIONS.

The apparent agreement between the State Department and France on the valuation of French exports to this country is particularly interesting, coming as it does at a time when the Senate finance committee is considering administrative phases of the tariff. The French have accepted the State Department's proposal, with reservations. It appears that the possibility of Congress writing the new tariff bill on the basis of domestic valuation has influenced the French to make a settlement.

The tariff act of 1922 provides that agents of the Treasury Department shall be sent abroad to determine the manufacturing costs of goods being imported to the United States. Duties were to be calculated on the basis of the agents' findings. The activities of these agents in France brought a storm of protest. Foreign exporters to the United States had been in the habit of fixing their own valuations, which means that they virtually decided how much duty they would pay. Some firms refused to open their books to the American agents, but the tariff act provided that the American market should be closed to such exporters.

Agitation became so intense that the two countries entered into a temporary agreement under which American agents were withdrawn. This left no means of collecting necessary data on production costs, and the French again complained that American rather than French valuation was being used in fixing duties. After two years of negotiations, France has agreed to receive Treasury agents and to send her own agents to this country. The American agents, however, must speak French, and they must act only on invitation of French exporters. Furthermore, if Congress should retain the provision for an embargo against exporters who refuse to submit their books, France will nullify the agreement.

This case emphasizes the wisdom of abandonment of the entire system of foreign valuations. The Treasury has repeatedly had trouble in attempting to fix a fair valuation on imported goods, because the law applies the tariff to foreign and not domestic values. The uselessness of boosting tariff rates to protect industry and labor and leaving the valuation largely in the hands of foreign importers is obvious. Adequate protection can not be given as long as there is opportunity for undervaluation. Attempts to determine fair foreign valuations lead to innumerable difficulties and misunderstandings with other countries.

The time is ripe for Congress to put the tariff on United States valuation. If the price at which foreign goods are sold in this country is used as a basis for duties, there can be no fraud or guesswork, and the expense of maintaining agents abroad can be eliminated. Domestic valuation is applied under the present law, but only as an alternative. It should be made the basic principle on which duties are calculated. The Senate finance committee, by adopting the United States selling price as the basis of tariff duties, can at one stroke eliminate friction and fraud and secure more general and just protection of all American industries.

AN AIRPORT WARNING.

Those who are accustomed to travel over highways or rails see an airplane circling overhead and at once reflect on the contrast between travel on the ground and in the air. Aircraft, it appears, has no fixed routes and few restrictions. Yet, as a matter of fact, airplanes engaged in regular service are held to routes only slightly less rigid than overland conveyances. It has long been recognized that only localities which provide good highways can expect to become centers of travel, but it has only recently been recognized that a city can have no part in the rapid development of the aviation industry without an adequate airport.

A number of cities in the United States have gained prominence as aviation centers because of their foresight in providing landing facilities. Many other cities have aspired to become air centers, but have delayed construction of an airport so long that airways have been established elsewhere. Philadelphia has long talked of building a fine municipal airport, but action has been slow, so slow in fact that Assistant Postmaster General Glover has authorized removal of the Philadelphia air-mail terminal to the Central Airport near Camden, N. J. The conditions of the present Philadelphia field is such as to make landing dangerous in winter. The mayor and postmaster were informed a year ago that unless the field was put in condition to allow safe operation during all seasons the air-mail service would be withdrawn.

Washington is in a somewhat similar position. Hoover Field and the Washington Airport are considered too small for the air-mail service, and air-mail planes are permitted to use Bolling Field by permission of the Army. The arrangement is not a satisfactory one. Air-mail planes have to be serviced at Hoover Field. Bolling Field is considered reasonably satisfactory so long as no passengers are carried over the air-mail line, but in rainy weather the field becomes soggy and night landing is hazardous. Of paramount concern is the fact that at any time the Government may find it necessary to ban civilian planes from the field.

Washington can not afford to jeopardize its future position in aviation by delaying action on a municipal airport. It would be a serious reflection on the National Capital to have aviation concerns pass it by in favor of cities with better landing facilities. The experience of Philadelphia should stimulate action on the local airport project.

DECLINE IN NATIONAL BANKING.

The report of John W. Pole, comptroller of the currency, on the decline of national bank resources is certain to renew demands for legislation liberalizing Federal banking laws. The report confirms previous statements of Mr. Pole that the national bank system is in danger of gradual extinction, because more favorable charters may be obtained from the States. It should hasten the formation of a new policy on national banking in the Treasury Department, and set congressional committees on banking to work.

During the past three months total resources of the national banks decreased $1,581,684,000. The number of banks in operation declined from 7,575 to 7,536. Loans, discounts and security holdings showed comparable reductions. The one bright spot in the report was the section devoted to the growth of trust operations by the national banks. Permits to exercise trust powers have been granted to 2,442 national banks, and 1,734 of them have established trust departments. During the last three years the number of banks operating trust departments has increased 57 per cent, and the number of trusts being administered 191 per cent. Because of the popularity of fiduciary activities this is a decided asset to the national banking system.

The comptroller's report makes no comment on the decline of resources, but several weeks ago Mr. Pole told the Maryland Bankers Association that 79 national banks with total resources of nearly $3,000,000,000 had passed under State jurisdiction. Branch banking, which is prohibited to national banks, is making rapid gains in the United States. Many institutions are finding branch operations so attractive that they are willing to substitute State for Federal charters.

It does not follow, however, that the number of State banks is increasing. It is estimated that small banks are failing at the rate of approximately 1,000 per year. This does not represent critical financial conditions, but rather a rapid evolution in banking methods. Huge financial institutions in the cities are flourishing and small rural banks are disappearing, because the communities in which they operate are no longer isolated from large financial centers. The tendency indicates further development of branch banking.

Whether or not Congress will put national banks on a par with State banks in this regard is a question. It is generally agreed that if the national bank system is to survive Congress will have to provide more attractive charters. In view of the rapid transformation which is taking place the situation can not be given attention too soon.

BRITISH COTTON SITUATION.

Under a temporary agreement the British cotton strike has been ended, and the Lancashire mills are again working in full swing. Since July 29, when the strike was called, some 500,000 workers have been idle and more than $15,000,000 has been lost in wages. Under the terms of the temporary agreement the status quo ante is established and the dispute will be referred to a court of arbitration with both workers and employers pledged to accept the court's award. The strike was precipitated by the operators' determination to reduce wage scales by about one-eighth, on the ground that they could not pay the existing scale. The workers refused to accept the cuts, contending that they already were laboring for a starvation wage. Sir Horace Wilson, permanent secretary to the minister of labor, brought the disputants together. He suggests that employers and workers form a joint committee under an independent chairman to insure cooperation between the government's committee that is soon to inquire into the whole state of the cotton industry and cotton trade organizations, and a joint committee which is embarking on the same purpose.

The strike that has now been ended was but a symptom of the diseased condition of the British cotton industry. The mills, since the war, have had hard sledding and, under present conditions, are probably unable to pay the prevailing wage scale without losing money. But the workers are in a desperate condition. They are paid mere pittances, and can not be expected to live on less. The strike has served to aggravate the situation. Workers and mills have lost large sums through enforced idleness, and it will take the entire district years to recover from the setback. If the workers were unable to live on reduced wages before the strike, they will be worse off now, when many of them are in debt. The mills are handicapped by the loss of eighteen days' operations.

The future of the British cotton industry will be determined in the next few months. It is obvious that if cotton spinning is to survive as a major British activity the mills must be modernized, new processes must be adopted, and a thorough reorganization undertaken. While cotton cloth may not be in as great demand as it once was, it is still consumed in large quantities in Asia. It can be produced at a profit to the manufacturer and under wage scales commensurate with modern living costs, provided the industry is modernized, properly organized and economically managed.

ZEPPELIN STAMPS.

Just how many stamp collectors there are in the world who wish to own postage stamps which show by the envelopes to which they are attached that they were carried on the Graf Zeppelin will probably never be known. But the Postoffice Department will discover very soon how many of these philatelists are ready to pay the price for stamps of this character. The price seems to be rather high, at least to the noncollector who is inclined to growl if he finds one of his letters returned to him stamped "returned because of insufficient postage."

Letters carried on the Graf Zeppelin will travel de luxe, and the cost to the sender is steep enough to pay for extraordinary care. The Daily Postal Bulletin issued by the department for August 15 announces that the charges for postal service from Los Angeles to Lakehurst, N. J., on letters weighing not more than one ounce, are 60 cents each; postcards, 30 cents each. From Los Angeles to Friedrichshafen the rates are $1.80 and 90 cents, respectively. The sender may have a letter carried from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen for $1.20, or he may send a postcard for 60 cents.

The big airship is somewhere over western Asia today, and no one can tell just when she will land in California; but if there are any collectors in Washington who have designs on the service between Los Angeles and the home port of the Zeppelin it would seem advisable that they "get busy" at once.

CHURCHILL ON PARITY

From Speech by Winston Churchill at Ottawa, August 15.

It has been the aim of every British government to remove all stumbling blocks from the path of Anglo-American friendship.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance has been happily merged in a wide agreement, securing peace in the Pacific Ocean. Our war debts have been settled in accordance with the wishes of the United States. Whatever we may think of that settlement, so far as it affects the general interests of Europe, so long as we ourselves receive from Europe what we are to pay to the United States, it is clearly not a matter that has any longer a direct influence on our affairs or feelings.

The only live issue that remains is the question of a naval agreement. This is a difficult topic, and one on which it is essential that any discussion should be cool and matter of fact.

The only question is, will the new naval agreement make things easier? Will it bring about a reduction in expenditures on armaments? The Washington conference of 1921 was a great decision for which the government of which I was a member bears its responsibility. But on looking back, I begin to wonder if it did not do as much harm as good to Anglo-American relations. In fact, the only causes of friction in the last few years between our kindred peoples have been on points connected with the working of this naval agreement. But the Washington agreement dealt only with battle fleets. That was a simple matter.

Fears Misunderstandings.

The new agreement will be a more complicated affair. It seems to me that we are opening up a field of infinite technical discussion with immense possibilities of misunderstanding if we try to regulate the whole of the minor construction of the two countries in accordance with some rigid treaty instrument.

The United States is almost a continent, possessing everything requisite for prosperity. We are an island, dependent for our food and our raw material on sea-borne trade. This island is the center of an empire whose only routes are across the ocean.

We in Great Britain are only one hour from Europe, with its animosities and quarrels. There can be no parity of circumstances. To apply a rigid numerical equality to conditions so markedly unequal runs a great risk of not arriving at the true goal, which is that the United States and the British Empire shall be equal powers upon the sea.

If this great diversity of conditions is not understood by the United States, then a fair agreement will be very hard to reach. And if it is reached on paper without the real assent of public opinion in each country, then in years to come it may again raise up those difficulties which it is our object to sweep away. I doubt if a rigid agreement will lead to an effective reduction in expenditures.

Foresees Worse Rivalries.

Great Britain is anxious to meet the wishes of the United States, especially when at their head is a President who has a profound knowledge of European affairs and who shows a keen appreciation of European difficulties.

But if the result of this good-will were to produce the spectacle of two large, costly navies, rigid replicas of one another, jealously scrutinized by experts across the ocean, measured in their last detail and advertised by the press, it would produce conditions not less vicious than those that produced the rivalries and competitions before. I would prefer each nation to go its own way, acting in a neighborly spirit and building the fewest ships it needs for its own naval security.

We are not offended if the United States builds the cruisers they require for the exercise of their authority or for their security. We are sure they will never be used against us.

Louisville Times: The Times joins The Washington Post, as quoted in a dispatch to the Times by Lorenzo Martin, today, in protesting against plans to exploit Great Falls, fifteen miles from the White House, on Potomac River, for power.

Great Falls, as Lord Bryce—then Ambassador Bryce—said, is unique as the prospective possession of a national capital.

There is nothing approaching it, as a natural spectacle, in, or in the vicinity of, any European city. It would be regarded by London, Berlin, Paris, Budapest, Prague or any other European capital as of priceless value.

"Of course you will protect it," said Lord Bryce, more than twenty years ago. Of course, it should be protected, and the American people—because making Washington incomparably the most beautiful national capital is of interest to every intelligent American—should instruct Congress to stand between Washington and the ruin of Great Falls.

JUST FOLKS

At the altar he seemed so tall and strong,
But the days are many and marriage is long,
And the vows he made were but words he spoke,
For the first storm came and his courage broke.
And she had to fight through the wildest weather
Holding the family together.

Now the task is done, and the children grown,
But she never speaks of the care she's known.
He is dead and gone, but she gives their fame
To the one who failed, for they bear his name,
His every fault she has hid, for she'd rather
Have them think well of their father.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to a Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

My dear Louise:

Next to being decent the hardest job in this imperfect world is to go your decent way in humility and forget how much your decency exceeds that of others.

Many times I have heard you express an unflattering opinion of girls who "pet." Many times your tone of voice has registered scorn of girls who are "wild."

Yours is the natural intolerance of self-respecting youth, and I wouldn't lessen or change it, but you need a word of caution.

First, you must remember that petting and wildness are details of conduct and not people. You can and should condemn the conduct, but it doesn't follow that you must condemn the girls who conduct themselves that way.

If petting is part of a girl's conduct unselfish service to an invalid mother may be another part. If you condemn the whole girl because she pets you condemn the good in her also. And to condemn a girl for being good to a sick mother seems rather foolish.

The point I'm making is that you mustn't throw a frock away because of one soiled spot. The spot may be cleaned and then the frock will be as good as new.

The person who does wrong also does right, and if you assume the right to judge him on one point you must be fair enough to consider his good points, too.

You must learn, in short, to distinguish between acts and people—to hate sin without hating the sinner.

That doesn't mean you must be pals with the sinner, however. It is well to remember Franklin's homely saying, that he who lies down with dogs will get up with fleas.

Condemn wildness and avoid being intimate with girls who are wild, but pity more than you criticize. Remember that a bad girl probably wouldn't be bad if she had been given a decent chance, and remember all your days that the only person you have a divine call to judge and keep straight is Louise.

If you do that little job well you won't have any spare time to examine the faults of others.

Just one more suggestion. When you call attention to the faults of others you are unconsciously making a comparison. "How bad she is!" means "Please note how good I am." We never call attention to the other fellow's soiled hands if our own are soiled, but only when ours are freshly washed and we are proudly conscious of their whiteness.

There are many ways to make yourself popular, but calling attention to your superior goodness isn't one of them. In fact, I know of nothing else that irritates people quite so much as a good man's self-satisfied assurance that he is more righteous than they.

I'm not insinuating anything, honey. You're in no immediate danger of sprouting wings or becoming a prissy little prig.

I'm just putting a bug in your ear before anything happens.

Love. DAD.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Wherein Mr. Twitchell's Day is Ruined.

(Scene: Shore cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Twitchell. It is extremely hot. Mr. Twitchell is getting into his bathing suit.)

Mrs. Twitchell: What're you going to do?

Elmer: I'm gonna peel off and lay around the beach.

Mrs. Twitchell: You're gonna do nuthin of the kind.

Elmer (puzzled): Why not?

Mrs. Twitchell: You know very well what you're gonna do today.

Elmer: I'm gonna lay around on the beach, I am, and keep cool.

Mrs. Twitchell (resolutely): You're going to the city with me.

Elmer: What for?

Mrs. Twitchell: To the August fur sale.

Elmer (painfully): August fur sale! Woman, this aint no day for no August fur sale.

Mrs. Twitchell: We had this all out yesterday and you promised to go with me and help me pick out a coat.

Elmer: Would you go in and pick out a fur coat on a day like this?

Mrs. Twitchell: I don't like the heat any more than you, but I've gotta have a new fur coat for the winter and the only way to get one cheap is at the August fur sale. Take your swim, and then hurry out and dress.

Elmer (earnestly): We can go to the fur sale tomorrow. The paper says we'll get showers tonight and it'll be cooler.

Mrs. Twitchell: Don't argue. All the best coats are picked the first day and you've gotta be there if you wanna get 'em.

Elmer: Well, you go in and get anything you please, dear; I'm gonna lay around the beach. This heat gets me. If I aint careful at my age I might get a sunstroke or sumpin, I might.

Mrs. Twitchell: You always criticize anything I buy. The last fur coat I bought you said looked like an old sack made out of the skins of moth-eaten police dogs. You told me I should never buy anything like that without letting you pass on it and today you. . . . .

Elmer (feebly): I know, but I'd be no help to you today, I aint in the mood. Phew! Whatever you buy will be okay with me.

Mrs. Twitchell: Yeah? What can I spend?

Elmer: Just be reasonable, that's all I ask.

Mrs. Twitchell (reading from an advertisement): They run from $250 to $1,800. There's a lovely native mink reduced to $1,050 from $1,200.

Elmer (startled): One coat or by the dozen?

Mrs. Twitchell: And here's a Russian karakul for $900, reduced from $1,125.

Elmer (beginning to worry): You aint thinking of goin that high, are you?

Mrs. Twitchell: That's not high for a good coat.

Elmer: Aint there anything cheaper than that?

Mrs. Twitchell: It's a very smart coat. I'd rather get something like that and know I was right than buy something cheap and have you criticize it.

Elmer (with complete surrender): Well, I guess, maybe I had better go in with you and look around. I'll take a dip and be right out. Don't go without me!

(Curtain.)

Just a Guess.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Civilized Treatment of Prisoners Demanded—Most Cases Pathological, Needing Hospital Care.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to lift my feeble and probably unavailing voice in protest against the shocking conditions in Dannemora and Auburn Prisons and other prisons in New York State, which occasioned the recent horrible riots when State troops were summoned to shoot down the inmates like rats. These conditions can be multiplied ad infinitum in all the prisons the length and breadth of this great country.

May I honestly ask is this not a sinister commentary on the "system" which governs these United States? The "system" which so many able and honest men have fought desperately, but in vain, to conquer? The political corruption which holds the prisons in its iron grip, is eating at the very heart of the Nation. Are these our boasted ideals?

Prisons should be hospitals, scientifically administered, not instruments of torture, controlled by political henchmen! It makes a patriotic American shudder. How many "Canada Blackies" (who perished of tuberculosis after seven years of solitary confinement) will result from this struggle of the desperate worm? Is it possible to purge a vast country of the political corruption that controls its every movement? Will it ever be possible to place educated and trained men (free of political gangs) at the head of institutions which deal with human beings, and by education—meaning not book learning, but education of the brain, mind, soul and heart—trained to administer faithfully? Are not discipline and law and order a possibility without inhuman cruelty?

ALICE PRESTON.

Correspondent Discounts a Naval Conference From Which Naval Experts Are Excluded.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I had a good laugh when reading this morning's paper and saw the White House announcement that our naval experts would no longer participate in the arms conferences and that the old order of things had passed. Is the conference in 1922 old? I would call it the return to the old order. Who were our naval experts that gave Great Britain superiority in 1922? Surely, you do not call the well-known attorney, Charles Evans Hughes, a naval expert. Coolidge did think that there should be some one at Geneva who knew something about our Navy, and attempted to create a new order of things. Now we are returning to the old. What a "rooking" we will get!

Every Britisher knows his navy, and especially those of the diplomatic corps. They will have a great story to tell their grandchildren of how they slipped it over on the great business administration of Herbert Hoover. You can absolutely depend upon them to "bring home the bacon" if you give them a chance. Although Dawes is a man of great ability, he is liable to find himself in a position where he will have to accept their terms or go down in history as the biggest militarist of his day.

Parity to the British does not convey the same meaning to them as it does to us. They like to define it so that it will mean superiority to the British.

Use of Streets as Public Garages Condemned by Indignant Citizen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My compliments to "The Observer" in this morning's Post. That chap is worthy of a congressional medal for his decidedly truthful criticism concerning the streets of Washington. That the once interesting, restful, quaintly beautiful streets of the Capital City have become hideously ugly, dirty and disreputable by turning them into public garages there is absolutely no doubt whatever.

There was a time when one driving through the streets of Washington could see below the second floor windows in either the business or residential sections, or, if walking, it was possible to see the gardens and artistic doorways to the charming homes on many of the streets and avenues; but try to do it now! One sees nothing but a long line of closely parked automobiles on both sides of the way.

Nowhere is there displayed such flagrant abuse of the laws, and the seeming determination by the police and city officials not to see this abuse, as one sees right here in the law-making city of the Nation. Even Chicago, where the population is only 25 per cent American (native), does not permit the streets to be used as a public garage.

In the Loop district, cars are only allowed to stop long enough to discharge their passengers.

Official Washington has not only made our streets a motor stable for the convenience of individuals, but has created death traps for the citizen who is forced to cross the streets on foot. It is estimated that approximately 80 per cent of the injuries to persons in the streets of Washington are due to stepping from behind parked cars in the path of oncoming machines.

Indian Friends Of Curtis Plan Tribe Festival

Stalwart Chiefs Seen at Inauguration Meet in New Mexico.

MANY will remember at the time of President Hoover's inauguration, groups of festively-clad Indians wandering through Washington's streets and public buildings. All were here to see one of their number take the next to the highest office the country has to offer. At the Inaugural Charity Ball, Vice President Curtis received a party of these stalwart chiefs and their families, who added much to the brilliancy of that occasion. And now they have returned to their Western homes, to carry on their tribal customs and worships.

Any one fortunate enough to be in the Southwestern part of the country next week would see one of the greatest of the Indians' tribal gatherings in New Mexico. The religous urge of a primitive people, prayer finding expression in dancing, chants to the Great Spirit, again calls the Indian tribes of the Southwest.

The annual summons has gone out among them for the ceremonial on August 28, 29 and 30, when the best known medicine men, athletes, dancers and singers of 22 tribes will convene from New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado and Utah, in Gallup, N. Mex.

The spectacle is one of the most extraordinary that this continent has to offer. It is an impressive expression of the life and religion of the Indians bound up with nature, the awe-inspiring rituals of a barbaric, yet artistic, race.

At the ceremonial one will see the best of centuries-old games, arts and handicraft of the tribes, and the most honored of the traditional dances, songs and rituals. The prayers and petitions of the Indians do not take a verbal form, but are rendered by intricate dances which involve much physical sacrifice and solemn ceremony. Every detail of their lives, every venture upon which they embark, every change of season, the appearance of the sun, a storm, is attended by a chant or dance. Fires an ddancing shadows, beads, furs, feathers and lithe bodies, make up the dances which after centuries of ritualistic privacy may now be seen by white men.

Italian Envoy "In Residence" All Summer

The Italian Embassy has been "in residence" all summer contrary to the usual order of things. The latest news from the Embassy is that the Air Attache, Commander Silvio Scaroni, one of Washington's most attractive bachelors, sailed yesterday on the Aquitania for a two months' leave in his native country. There would have been great consternation had this trip been more than a conge.

The rapidly increasing popularity of intercity motor coach travel results today in the opening of Washington's new centrally located Union Bus Depot at 1336 New York Ave. N.W., the former home of the Citizens Savings Bank. Its appointments mark it as one of the most finely equipped motor coach depots in the East. The waiting room is large and airy and ticket and information booths have many new facilities for quickly answering requests for travel information. There is also a popular-priced soda fountain and luncheonette.

Greyhound Lines reach from coast to coast on three different transcontinental routes and connect the important cities from border to border. Greyhound buses now travel more than 100,000 miles every day.

Besides Greyhound Lines, the new Union Bus Depot will also serve the buses of Mitten Tours—to Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York.

Hoover Will Speak Over Radio Today

President to Reply to Thanks of Virginians Over Selection of Summer White House; Noted Numbers on WRC.

The celebration arranged by the people of Madison County, Va., to thank President Hoover for selecting the mouth of the Rapidan River as the summer White House will be broadcast over a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Co. at 11:30 o'clock this morning, direct from the fair grounds at Madison, Va. During the ceremonies President Hoover will reply with a short address. Other speakers will include Gov. Harry Flood Byrd and Representative Jacob A. Garber, of Virginia. A musical program will be furnished by the Quantico Marine Band. Station WRC will serve as the key station.

The General Electric Hour offers a variety of selections by well-known composers in the request program to be broadcast at 8 o'clock. "Skyward," a composition by Nathaniel Shilkret, who directs the concert orchestra, will precede a talk on aviation by a guest speaker. Vocal highlights will be presented by Caroline Andrews, soprano; Lucius Metz, tenor, and Leon Salathiel, barytone. Musical details follow:

March and scherzo from "Sixth Symphony" (Tschaikowsky), Three Thumbnail Sketches, "Voce di Primavera" (Strauss), soprano solo; "Slavonic Dance in E Minor" (Dvorak), "Flight of the Bumble Bee" (Rimsky-Korsakoff), "Souvenir" (Drdla), tenor solo: "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6" (Liszt), "The Lost Chord" (Sullivan), barytone solo; "Soirees de Vienne" (Schubert), excerpts from "The Fortune Teller" (Herbert), trio with orchestra, and variations on an old German Folk Song (Oche).

There will be the regular Lucky Strike Dance period at 9 o'clock, followed by the organ recital by Lew White.

Ludwig Laurier will conduct the Slumber Music orchestra in the following numbers: "Pomp and Circumstance" (Elgar), selection from "The Bohemian Girl" (Balfe), "Air de Ballet" (Herbert), "Fly Menuet" (Ozibulka), "Poem" (Fibich), and "Lily of the Valley" from "Ballet of the Flowers" (Hadley).

Rudy Valle and his orchestra will be featured between 11 o'clock and midnight.

Del Staigers, cornetist, will play one of his own compositions, a light waltz caprice which he calls "Hazel," during the Goldman Band concert broadcast from the campus of New York University at 7:45 o'clock by WJZ. This will be the last broadcast concert of the season.

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra will be heard through WBAL at 8 o'clock in a broadcast from Belle Isle, Detroit. Victor Kolar will conduct the ensemble.

Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, will discusse "The Farmers' Actual Outlook" from WMAL at 9 o'clock.

Jesse Crawford will feature one of his own compositions "Evolutions of the Moon Songs" during his recital which will be broadcast over WMAL at 9:30 o'clock. Other selections are "La Cinquantaine," "Nights of Gladness," "Traumerei," Schumann, and a popular medley.

The Sorrento Serenade will be featured at 7 o'clock, followed by the Nit Wit and the Temple Hours.

An hour of dance music between 10 and 11 o'clock will close WMAL's day on the air.

Station WOL will broadcast a two-hour program, beginning at 6 o'clock, including a mandolin and guitar recital, Beatrice Warwick, pianist, "Amos 'n' Andy," the Capitol Trio, dinner and dance music.

WJSV has arranged a get-together party for all of the talent heard over the station within the past few months and will be on the air from 6 o'clock until midnight with diversified entertainment.

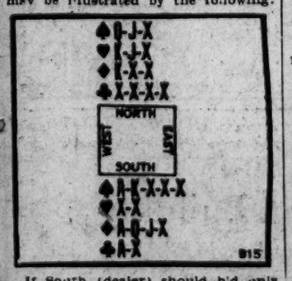
WORK'S BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.

HOW often we hear the remark from players who are making up a table for a game of Contract: "Let's be careful not to get ——in the game; his bids are so wild that he is an expensive partner." If we stop and think that when not vulnerable a 4-trick set (a not unusual occurrence) if doubled, would cost 700 and if vulnerable the penalty would be 1400, it requires no argument to prove that a player who habitually overbids is a dangerous vis-a-vis at the Contract table.

Notwithstanding these admissions, it is my opinion that in Contract more is lost by underbidding than by overbidding. I think this will be generally recognized as knowledge of the game increases. I know however, that at this time the expression of this opinion is considered by many to be much too radical; I have had teachers take me to one side and urge me not to repeat it. They contend that experts may be safe in bidding boldly but that overbidding is the greatest fault of players of moderate ability.

The type of hand with which the Contract underbidding is apt to lose may be illustrated by the following:



If South (dealer) should bid only one Spade, North would pass. He lacks the count (13) to jump a bid of one. If South's bid has been a minimum, (for example, if South had no strength outside the Spade suit) seven tricks would be the most the combined hands could expect to take and they might take only five or six. Consequently, North should not jump a bid of one and a timid South who did not bid two with the above hand would lose a game.

All that is needed for a two-bid is three high-card tricks plus three other highly probable tricks. South should bid two Spades, North would bid three, (a count of 8 is sufficient to jump two to three), and South having more than a minimum two-bid would bid four. It will be noted that Declarer would make at least four.

Screen Grid Tubes Prove Revolution

Many Defects in Radio Receiving Sets Eliminated; Declared Most Important Contribution to Broadcast Reception.

Every one who has given the matter any thought admits that the screen grid tube is a logical and valuable new contribution to radio receiving sets, according to R. H. Langley, director of engineering for the Crosley Radio Corporation. It eliminates that small feed-back capacity between plate and grid which was the outstanding defect of the three element tube. All the work that was done to develop methods of balancing, all the neutralizing methods, all the complicated transformers and condensers and wiring, all the careful balancing and rebalancing of the sets, is swept into history by the screen grid tube.

"It would seem as if this alone was sufficient reason for using the new tube in the sets that we build today."

"Yes," Langley said. "There are those, however, who hesitate about it. They ask questions about life and uniformity, and wonder whether it would not be the part of wisdom to stick to the tried and proven three element tube. It is the same old story of those for whom the march of progress is too swift. But their questions can be answered, and their doubts will soon be resolved.

"The filament system in the screen grid tube is exactly the same as it was in the well established heater type tube. This answers any question about life. So far as uniformity is concerned, it is perhaps true that the new tube may show a somewhat greater variation for the next few months. But it was the variation in that troublesome feed-back capacity in the old tubes that really caused the trouble, and in the new tubes this capacity has been reduced to a negligible value.

"No one claims, of course, that the tremendous amplification of which the new tube is capable, can actually be utilized in a broadcast receiver. No one would want a receiver ten or twenty times as sensitive as last year's models. They were powerful enough to reach down to signals no stronger than the static and noise on a cold winter night, and any greater sensitivity would be useless.

"But the greater amplification of the screen grid tube can nevertheless be very effectively used to make a much better receiver. With it, it is possible to get considerably greater gain in the radio-frequency portion of the set, and thus to cut down on the audio amplification which is needed. This permits the use of resistance coupled audio stages, which give a tremendous advantage in the quality of reproduction. It also permits the use of the bias type of detector, instead of the grid-leak type, which is another great step in the direction of good quality. Both of these features were the dream of set designers years ago, but never until the screen grid tube came was it possible to utilize them.

"Because the tube itself gives greater amplification, it is not necessary to use such high ratios in the radio-frequency transformers. This makes possible the use of types of transformers that give practically uniform gain and uniform selectivity over the whole range of broadcast frequencies. Thus, while last year's set was quite sensitive in the middle of the dial, and relatively weak at one end or both, the new screen grid sets are sensitive and selective over the entire dial.

"Radio-frequency transformers in the three element tubes had to have three windings. The third winding was for balancing the feed-back capacity, and with it was associated the troublesome balancing condenser. All these parts are gone in the screen grid set. The saving in parts and wiring complication alone is important, but when it is remembered that these additional parts were tacked onto the tuned circuits, and contributed their losses to cut down amplification and selectivity, the advantages of the screen grid tube become more apparent than ever.

"The set of today and tomorrow uses screen grid tubes. It is perhaps the most important contribution yet made to broadcast reception."

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"Leo."

IF August 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 5 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m., and from 7:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. The danger period is from 4:30 p. m. to 6:13 p. m.

Nearly all relations in life will be benefited by the influences in force on this date. There will be an atmosphere of good will and helpfulness, which makes for progress and success. Stability is predicted in business circles.

Children born on this August 17 will have very cautious and secretive natures, and will always be in an intrigue of some kind. They will be very undemonstrative, but will be capable of sincere and deep feelings. They will be loyal, sincere and honest.

You are of a type that will long for retirement at an early age. You do your share, while you are in things, but you will be glad to be out of the "thick and thin" of life as soon as possible. You dream, work, save, and worry for the time to come when you are "dead wood" and not a live wire. It is your idea of heaven on earth. The realization of your dreams, in all probability, will show that you have been chasing a will-o'-the-whisp.

You must fight losing your mental vigor and youthful interests in life. It is by retaining them that you stay young. You must learn to take care of yourself, for neglect today will be paid with interest tomorrow. Live on your body's income, and not on its capital. Life is a growth and the last half should be the better half—not a time of degeneration. Do not be too anxious to let go your grip on things! Never be satisfied with what you have done!

You have a stolid and determined mind. When love enters your life, however, you become easily influenced by the person who has aroused the affectionate side of your nature. It is within their power to do you great good or great harm. Choose your mate carefully!

Dare Interprets the Mode

Bed-jackets with matching handkerchiefs for lovely ladies who are never too ill to be lovely. (DAH-Ray Designs.)

IN the summer a young woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of * * * negligees. In the summer and all the time, of course, because there are so many phases of negligees! For negligees can mean anything from a charming little almost-nothing-at-all to wear in bed over a nightgown for any number of silly reasons (from an after-theater cigarette to a before-breakfast cup of tea) to a gorgeous affair popularly called a tea gown.

Dainty women realize the value of these little lovelinesses. And they are so simple and inexpensive to have! For they can consist of a half a square yard of material simply picoted, or a lovely little jacquette made of two and a quarter yards of georgette and edged with marabou, or a wide square piece of lace.

Look around the house—I am sure that you will find odds and ends and left-overs from which you can make dainty boudoir things with just a little imagination—and a couple of trips to the hemstitcher's.

Just for that we have made you a carefully illustrated leaflet, which tells you how to make some of the darlingest negligees, bed-scarfs and shawls and things. Really unusual, too, and ever so easy to make!

Need a new pajama top? And what about those cute little nothings that you have to make for Christmas gifts? Better send that stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the leaflet—you will wish you had!

Wouldn't you like to sip a cup of jasmine tea and read HIS letter, draped in a dainty bed-scarf like the lovely lady is wearing in today's illustration? Uh-huh!

Last day in which to send your stamped self-addressed envelope for the illustrated leaflet, which tells you how to make your idea of the last word in smart purses and bags.

Fashion may make demands, all she pleases upon our comfort by decreeing long sleeves with our summer dresses—as long as tinted malines fashions them. Lace sleeves are really so lovely that a caprice, which takes such a form, can be nothing if not satisfactory for its victims!

Sleeveless or with sleeves, whichever you prefer. There are just two excuses for wearing a sleeveless summer dress—the one is youth and the other is an overpowering yearning for sun-kissed skin.

Dresses with long sleeves, nevertheless, retain the preference, because they are of a more dressy and "distingue" character.

By all means look for the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Post. You'll like its ideas and suggestions.

Uncle Ray's Corner

A Little Saturday Talk.

A POEM written by a little girl has been sent to me. It contains only four lines, but they are very sweet and I want to quote them to you. The verse has the title, "Mother's Love," and these are the words

Whether the sun is shining,
Whether the day is blue,
Mother Dear, I love you
For everything you do.

That was written by Ann Tilton, who is only eight years old. Ann has a good idea in her verse—if we give love to our mothers, it should be given no matter whether the day is bright or dull. "Mother's Day" is a good idea, but love which is given only one day a year does not amount to a great deal. That is like giving a Christmas dinner to "the poor" and forgetting that they may go hungry the rest of the year.

Ann says, "For everything you do." How many things does your mother do for you? She watched over you when you were a little baby, and when you were sick she gave you her tender care. Now your mother no doubt does many things for you. Think a little while, and you may be able to count up some of them.

The fact is that mothers often do too much for their children. Bit by bit, a child should learn to do things for himself. The mother should always be the friend of her son or daughter, but she should avoid doing so many things as to leave the child helpless.

Yet even if mothers do enough, but not too much, for their children, they do a great deal. To give proper care to a child is a large order, and a thoughtful mother can lead her children into the paths of fine, worth-while and beautiful lives.

There are many things which boys and girls can do to make the days of their mothers more pleasant. Girls may help in washing the dishes—a task which is hard for any one who has prepared a meal; and girls may also do little helpful things about the housework. Boys may run errands and do odd chores. The spirit in which such things are done is very important. If you do them in a way that your mother knows you are glad to be of service to her, you will do much to make her heart happy.

SHOULD SEE PHYSICIAN.

M. N. B. writes: I have a brother 24 years old, and he wets the bed about once a week. He will not see a doctor about it. Is this serious? When he was a child he used to wet the bed about every night until he was 12 years old, and then it stopped. Now he has started it again. He is a heavy smoker.

REPLY.

While this is not serious, it is inconvenient. He should see a physician and accept his advice.

CRYING IN HIS SLEEP.

R. E. S. writes: I would like to know what causes me to cry out in my sleep. Also, I awake after I have gone to sleep, and feel as if I were smothering and can not get my breath for a few seconds. I also feel numb and weak. This is worse after a hard day's work or if I get to bed soon after a hearty meal. I am a man, 28 years old and strong and husky, and apparently in good health.

REPLY.

You appear to be subject to night terrors. In some cases night terror is rather closely related to epilepsy. In other cases it has its origin in some emotion, such as a violent fright, fear of all kinds, worry and anxieties. Some people have night terrors which have grown out of ghost stories told them in childhood.

Have you had any of these experiences? Are you a worrier? You can at least avoid heavy supper and other bad eating habits. Do your sleep heavily covered, in a badly ventilated room? If so, you can help some by correcting that.

MOST STOCK PRICES SOAR IN BULL DRIVE

Bears Are Driven to Cover by Sharp Drop in Brokerage Loans.

CALL FUNDS 7 PER CENT

New York, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A bull market reminiscent of the violent upturns of late last year developed on the stock exchange today, as bears fled to cover before the brokerage loan figures, showing a decline of $68,000,000, and operators for the advance launched one of the most powerful upward drives of the year.

An impressive assortment of leading issues were bid up 2 to more than 16 points to record levels, and several stock price averages and indices broke once more into new high ground. Trading was in largest volume witnessed in a rising market since last March, nearly 4,800,000 shares changing hands.

Call money held at 7 per cent, and the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank made no change in its 5 per cent rediscount rate, still failing to follow last week's advance at New York. Time money, however, held at 8¾ to 9 per cent, and money brokers predicted somewhat firmer call money next week, as more funds are needed in the interior to move the crops, and the New York banks further reduce their Federal reserve borrowings.

Aided by Day's News.

The day's news was largely of a character to facilitate the upward movement. Weekly reviews again reported a less than normal decline in industry and retail trade for this time of year, and stated that preparations for extraordinarily active fall trade are in evidence.

Allis Chalmers proposed a 4-for-1 split-up and several favorable earnings reports made their appearance, including Continental Oil, Nevada Consolidated, Utah Coppers and Campbell Wyant Cannon Foundry.

Radio Corporation's second quarter earnings report, however, was disappointing, as had been generally forecast, covering preferred dividends by a slender margin. Earnings for the entire first half, however, were equivalent to 35 cents per common share, as compared to 28 cents in the first half of 1928. The second quarter is usually the poorest of the year for Radio. The report did not appear until after the close of the market.

Oils Strongest in Months.

The oils made the most notable progress in months, influenced by unconfirmed rumors of formation of a large holding company by Morgan and Mellon interests, and an assortment of unconfirmed merger prospects. Another cut in Pennsylvania crude prices was disregarded as a local adjustment. A wide assortment of industrial specialties, railroad, steel and several utilities displayed exceptional buoyancy, but coppers and motors failed to make much headway.

Among the leaders were General Electric, rising 9 points to touch 400 for the first time, and Standard of New Jersey, soaring nearly 8 points to a new high at 70¾. American Machine and Foundry was bid up about 16 points to a record price at 210.

Consolidated Gas, Continental Oil, Erie, General Asphalt, Gillette Safety Razor, Newport Co., New Haven, Pan American B, Pere Marquette, Simmons, Union Pacific, Worthington Pump and Paramount were among other issues reaching new tops.

Others Duplicate Peaks.

Westinghouse Electric and Baltimore & Ohio duplicated their peak prices, and Chesapeake & Ohio added close to its record level. Allied Chemical, Allis Chalmers, Du Pont, Atchison, Montgomery Ward, National Biscuit, Union Oil of California and Wright Aero were among issues rising 4 to 6 points.

Some week-end profit taking appeared in the final dealings, and several issues slipped off 1 to 3 points from their best levels of the day. U. S. Steel rose more than 4 points, but closed only about a point higher. General Motors and Bethlehem each sagged a fraction, and Lambert, Greene Cananea, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube were among isolated soft spots, closing 2 to 5 points lower. Adams Express, appearing on the tape for the first time since Monday, traded at 575, off 57 points.

The commodity markets were firm to strong. Wheat futures soared 4 cents a bushel on bullish harvesting reports from Canada, and corn mounted a cent or two on unfavorable weather. The decline in cotton was checked, and closing quotations were 20 to 55 cents a bale higher, influenced by reports of crop deterioration.

Foreign exchanges were somewhat firmer. The French franc mounted 3-16 of a point to 3.91 3-16 cents. Sterling cables held at 84.84¾, still below the gold import point.

G. F. HOOVER GIVEN NEW POST IN BANK

Becomes First Vice President of Northeast Savings. Dr. Hall Elevated.

STOCK MART IRREGULAR

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Elevation of George F. Hoover, second vice president of the Northeast Savings Bank, to the position of first vice president, filling the vacancy caused by the recent death of Charles R. Talbert and election of Dr. Percival Hall to succeed Mr. Hoover as second vice president, was announced yesterday, following the regular monthly meeting of directors of the institution.

Dr. Hall was graduated from Harvard College in the class of 1892, and in 1910 he was appointed president of Gallaudet College, Columbia Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, which position he has continuously held to the present time.

He is chairman of the board of trustees of All Souls' Church and was chairman of the building committee during the erection of that magnificent edifice. Dr. Hall has always been a strong supporter of every forward movement of his company and the advancement of all civic organizations.

He took a very active part in the Community Chest movement of last year, and under his leadership his section was one of the leaders. He has been a strong advocate of the public playgrounds for children and has worked unceasingly toward the consummation of that aim.

Increase in Trade Volume.

Dollar Volume of trade during he week ended August 10, as shown by check payments, was larger than in either the preceding week or the same period of last year, the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce reveals today. Steel plant activity was lower than in the previous week, but still considerably above the level of last year.

Bituminous coal output during the latest reported week showed a decline from the preceding week, but was greater than in the same period of 1928, and crude petroleum production showed further expansion as compared with both periods, reaching a new high level.

Receipts of cotton into sight were substantially larger than a year ago, and those of cattle and hogs at primary markets, covering the latest reported week, also showed gains over last year. Distribution of commodities through primary channels, as reflected by freight car loadings, was running considerably heavier than at this time a year ago.

The general index of wholesale prices showed a decline from the previous week and was about 2 per cent lower than in the same period of 1928. Prices for cotton, iron and steel averaged lower than in the week prior. Cotton prices were lower also than last year, but those for iron and steel averaged higher.

Interest rates on time funds were higher than in either the preceding week or the comparative period last year and call-money rates averaged lower than in the previous week, but were above those of a year ago. The Federal Reserve ratio showed a gain over both the preceding week and the same period last year.

Prices for stocks averaged lower than in the preceding week, but were considerably higher than at this time a year ago. Bond prices were lower than in either period and business failures were less numerous than in the corresponding week of 1928.

Stock Market Irregular.

Bond trading improved and stock transactions receded in number in an irregular market on the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday. The aggregate of shares sold, 240, failed to equal Thursday's record high for a number of weeks by 693 shares. Total bond transactions were $7,100; a $3,100 increase over the previous session.

Washington Gas bonds were the usual heavy sellers, $3,000 in the 5s going at point and fractional advances from 101; $1,100 of the B bonds sold at point and three-point recessions from 106 while a small lot of the A's sold fractionally lower than 102⅜.

Capital Traction stock began to gain, 25 shares transferring at 92½, fractional rise. A hundred shares of Real Estate Mortgage & Guaranty preferred changed hands at 77⅜, last sale price, and 55 shares of Mergenthaler Linotype sold at 104, last quotation.

Tri-Continental Corp. Report.

Tri-Continental Corporation, the $50,000,000 investment company sponsored by J. & W. Seligman & Co., yesterday made known the results of its operations for the first half year of its existence by reporting an increase of $5.29 a share in the liquidating value of its common stock for the six months ended July 31.

This increase, indicating earnings on the common at an annual rate of $10.58 a share, was after providing for accrued dividends on the preferred stock, accrued expenses, and Federal and State income taxes on realized profits, as well as a reserve for such taxes on the difference between cost and market value of the securities owned.

Reports of new financing of about $50,000,000 in connection with Tri-Continental Corporation have been current for several days, and it was stated yesterday that this financing will be for another large investing company which is being formed by J. & W. Seligman & Co. and in which Tri-Continental Corporation will have a substantial interest.

New Power Plant in Philippines.

It was announced by the Associated Gas & Electric System yesterday that construction work is about to begin on the new hydroelectric development project to be made in the Philippine Islands. This water power project, which will have a head of 635 feet, is located on the Bogotan River, about 50 miles from the City of Manila. Current will be transmitted over a steel tower transmission line at a voltage of 110,000, which will be the highest voltage in the entire Orient.

The power to be generated at this hydro will take care of the major portion of the electric requirements of the City of Manila and the adjacent and intervening territory and will be augmented by steam generated power at peak loads.

Freight Handling Sets Record.

The heavy freight traffic now being moved by the railroads of this country is being handled with a rapidity never before equaled by them, the Bureau of Railway Economics announced yesterday.

The average speed of freight trains in June this year, according to reports for the month just filed by the Class I railroads, was 13.4 miles per hour, the highest average ever reached in any month, and an increase of three-tenths of 1 mile above that for June last year. It also was an increase of one-tenth of 1 mile above that for May this year.

Branch Brokerage Offices on Ships.

Today M. J. Meehan & Co. will inaugurate branch brokerage offices on two famous ocean liners sailing almost simultaneously from either side of the Atlantic—the Berengaria of the Cunard Line, which leaves Southampton for New York, and the Leviathan of the United States Lines, leaving New York for Europe. Both branches will afford complete brokerage services in securities and commodities.

Sailing of the Leviathan will mark the first instance where an ocean liner has left the United States with a fully equipped brokerage office on board.

SAM RICE HURT AS NATS BOW TO WHITE SOX, 8-6

Boy, 13, Signs With Chicago Cub Team

Red Solomon, Bronx, Corraled by National League Leaders.

To Serve as Bat Boy and Witness World Series Games.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Samuel ("Red") Solomon, 13-year-old player-manager of a boys' baseball team in the Bronx, today became the youngest person ever to sign a major league contract by coming to "terms" with Joe McCarthy, of the Chicago Cubs, but this does not mean Red will begin his major league career immediately.

His father intends to keep Red in school at least one more year, during which time his activity with the Cubs will be limited to serving as bat boy upon their visits to New York and Brooklyn.

Master Solomon will, however, take time off from his studies to see the world series if the Cubs are participants, as a guest of the club. The boy, now in the seventh grade, may attempt two years at high school before becoming a full-fledged professional.

McGraw Signed Hoyt At Age of 15.

Red is third baseman and manager of a team of boys representing the New York Kiwanis Club in the league of about 1,000 teams, directed by Capt. George H. Maines, boys' baseball enthusiast and former president of the Michigan-Ontario League. Red is considered one of the best of the 15,000 boys playing in the league.

Waite Hoyt, of the Yankees, previously was the youngest player ever signed by a major league team. John McGraw signed Waite to a Giant contract at the age of 15 in the winter of 1914, but later permitted him to slip away from the team.

Reds Halt Phillies, Despite O'Doul's Homer

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Cincinnati put a stop to the sudden upward climb of Shotton's tail-enders and defeated Philadelphia, 7 to 3, today.

O'Doul hit his twenty-fourth homer of the year in the eighth inning.

Center Fielder Makes Double Play at First

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—They do strange things in the New York-Penn League these days.

Within two weeks a center fielder aided a batsman get a home run when the ball bounced off his head over the fence, another center fielder made a double play unassisted at first base.

It happened this way: Cowboy McHenry, Scranton center fielder, came tearing in on a line drive from the bat of Hartford, Elmira Swatsmith. Pritchard, on first base, sensing a clear single, had rounded second base and was still going. McHenry took the ball at his shoetops, and, gathering speed, dashed to first, doubling Pritchard. The play occurred in the seventh inning.

MACK STARS BY PROXY IN OUTFIELD

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 16.—Kid Gleason, Eddie Collins and other close adherents of Connie Mack have been claiming that this old boy, who hasn't played a game of ball in a quarter of a century and never did snatch fly balls, having been a catcher when in active practice, can judge the arc, direction and length of an outfield fly from a sitting position on the bench before the fly is hit. They even state that old Mr. Mack, while sitting in a leather rocker in a hotel lobby or lying in a Pullman berth on a train can plot on a diagram the approximate flight of an outfield sock by any hitter in the American League, given the name of the pitcher and a description of the pitch as to whether it is a fast ball or curve.

In this respect they claim for him a fielding average of about .775, which is a very high claim to be made on behalf of an all-season outfielder of 67 years who does all his outfielding from a sitting position a long way off.

Mack Assumes Full Responsibility.

Mr. Mack is always moving his outfielders about with wigwag signals done with a score card, placing them where he thinks the fly balls, if any, are going to drop and assuming responsibility for all operations out yonder except the mere mechanical work of reaching out and taking hold of the ball when it gets there. This, his total of chances accepted, is approximately three times that of any active field hand, as he undertakes to guess for all three precincts, reading from left to right. In reckoning his percentage I suppose you would charge the outfield hits, excepting grounders, against him and give him credit for all outfield putouts, but I am not going into the arithmetic, as that only leads to confusion with me.

When the Athletics went out to lark and play with the Cleveland Indians this p. m. I checked upon Mr. Mack's vicarious outfielding. The checking went all right for a while, but along in the later innings the Indians began to nag back at the A's and with people yelling and throwing straw hats and the mustard of a hot dog fouling the keys of the typewriter things became slightly balled up.

Mack Stars in Field, By Proxy.

However, it was my impression that, under the terms stated, Mr. Mack fielded himself a pretty good game of ball, by proxy.

George Earnshaw, a long, loose-hung right-hander, who seems to be made in sections like one of those wooden anatomical dolls that art students use for models, was pitching for Mr. Mack's company. The first fly was hit by Ed Morgan, and it was no fair test of Mr. Mack's knack, either, for the pitch seemed to be just nothing in particular.

Old Mr. Mack was sitting on the planks down in the trench, stooped and skinny and solemn, and waving his outfielders this way a bit, a few feet that way as Morgan went up with his racquet. There was no special swift on the pitch. Neither did it hook nor slice. When a pitcher just whangs the ball in there like a chap throwing a brick off a roof at a policeman, the guessing is harder, but Old Mr. Mack guessed right. The ball went to Al Simmons and he had nothing to do but stretch out his glove and take hold.

Gardner's Hit Charged as Error for Cornelius.

J. Giddyap Hodapp hit the next outfield smack, in the second inning. Bing Miller was waiting where Old Mr. Mack had put him and three or four steps put him under the ball. I believe Gardner's single Detroit, Mich., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The Yankees had one of their old-fashioned hitting afternoons here to down the Tigers by 12 to 2 today. Eddie Wells pitched, and had the help of Babe Ruth's thirty-second home run, hit off George Uhle in the first with Combs on base.

Tilden Beats Doeg, Gains Finals

Hunter Beats Austin, British Ace, in Eastern Semifinals.

"Big Bill" Beneficiary of Youth's Errors in Fourth Set.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—William T. Tilden, of Philadelphia, and Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, gained the final round of the Eastern grass court tennis singles championship today. They will meet tomorrow afternoon for the title won last year by John Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif.

Tilden eliminated Doeg in the semifinals today 6—3, 3—6, 6—4, 6—4, after Hunter had defeated the English crack, H. W. (Bunny) Austin, 6—4, 3—6, 6—2, 1—6, 6—1.

During the first set and part of the second of his match with Doeg, Tilden displayed the sort of tennis expected of him. He was pitted against a youngster who possesses a service more severe than Tilden's, and the national ranking star had to attend strictly to business to make sure of his games.

Doeg's service was so effective in the first set that during the fourth game he shot over three lightning-like shots in a row on service that scored perfect aces on Tilden and produced snickers and laughter from the gallery. Games in this set followed service until the eighth, when Tilden broke through for a 5—3 game lead and then took the next on his own cannon ball service.

Doeg Beats Himself by Errors In Fourth Set.

In the second set, games again followed service until the fourth game when it was Doeg's turn to break through and take the following game for a 4—1 lead. Games then again followed service until Doeg ran out the set 6—3.

Tilden raised his game a few notches to gallop away with the third set and then romped away with the fourth and deciding one as well. Doeg fell into a bad slump, his service failed him and he made so many errors that Tilden had nothing to do but wait for the youngster to beat himself.

Hunter and Austin played another rather colorless match, but it was redeemed by Hunter's exhibition of tireless energy in driving off forehand with all his strength for five full sets without a single resort to soft stroking.

Austin's handling of Hunter's forehand drive and the surprising speed he put on the ball raised the match a bit above the ordinary, but it was exciting only in spots. Although carrying more strokes than Hunter the Englishman never was in a position to make full use of his repertoire.

Misses Palfrey and Greef Meat in Women's Final Today.

Hunter kept Austin away from the net because the Briton has a fine volleying game, and this strategy, coupled with his own terrific driving game, gave him the match.

In the women's division Sarah Palfrey, 16-year-old conqueror of Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, continued her brilliant play by eliminating Mrs. L. A. Harper, of San Francisco, in straight sets in the semifinal round, 6—3, 6—3. She will meet 18-year-old Mary Greef, of Kansas City, in the final round on Sunday. Miss Greef reached the final round by crushing Ethel Burkardt, of San Francisco, 6—2, 6—2.

In the men's doubles Kenneth Appel, of Princeton, and Bradshaw Harrison, of Tacoma, Wash., scored the big upset of the day when they eliminated the seeded pair of George Lott, Chicago, and John Doeg, 3—6, 6—4, 8—6. Berkeley Bell, of Dallas, Tex., and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, defeated the British combination of Austin and J. S. Cliff, 7—5, 6—2. The Tilden-Hunter, Mercur-Hall match was unfinished when darkness set in.

Moss Subdues Cubs, Brooklyn Winning, 5-2

Brooklyn, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Fine pitching by Ray Moss caused the Cubs to pause, if only momentarily, in their pennant journey this afternoon. The young Brooklyn hurler shut out the Bruins for eight rounds and survived a ninth-inning rally to triumph over Charley Root by 5 to 2.

District Out Of Legion Series

Capital Post Beaten by Uniontown in Slugfest, 9-5.

Pennsylvanians Make 5 Runs Off Buscher in 2 Innings.

Special to The Washington Post.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 16.—Uniontown, Pennsylvania boys baseball champions, hurdled another obstacle on the road to national honors when it downed the Washington, D. C., representatives, 9 to 5, in the final game of Region 10 of the American Legion tourney at Shibe Park today. The victory gave Uniontown the right to compete in the Eastern States final at Washington next week.

Uniontown hopped on the offerings of Buscher at once. Walks to Malosky and Conteen placed two men on the bags and after two were out Yazanka laced a triple to right, driving two men across in the first.

The Pennsylvanians increased their lead in the second inning while Smith was holding Washington. Singles by Malosky and Ruper drove in three runs and finished Buscher. George, who replaced Buscher, got the side out without another run.

Another marker was garnered by the Uniontown team in the third. This came after two were out and two were on base. Wilcosky singled, sending home Yazanka, who had walked.

Lytle's Single Scores 2 Runs In Fourth.

Washington finally got to Smith in the fourth inning, when two hits, combined with two walks and a pair of errors, scored four runs. Lytle's single drove in two markers, while the other two were the result of a passed ball and wild throw.

The Capital City representatives tallied another in the fifth when P. Facchina singled, scoring King, who got on when he forced George. In the meantime George held the Uniontown batters at bay.

The Keystone nine came back to tally a run in the sixth inning, when, with the bases filled, Yazanka came through with a short hit that admitted Malosky.

Yazanka again came through for Uniontown in the pinch and drove out a single that scored Crackowitch and Conteen.

Revamped Pirates Slug Way to Victory, 9 to 3

Boston, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The Pirates came out of their batting slump today, hammering two Boston pitchers for 15 hits, and won their second victory of three games here by a 9 to 3 score. Manager Bush shifted the Pittsburg line-up, sending Paul Waner to first base and Fred Brickell to right field.

Traylor had a perfect day at bat, hitting two singles and two doubles, and drove in three runs.

By winning while the Cubs lost to Brooklyn, the Pirates reduced Chicago's lead to seven and a half games.

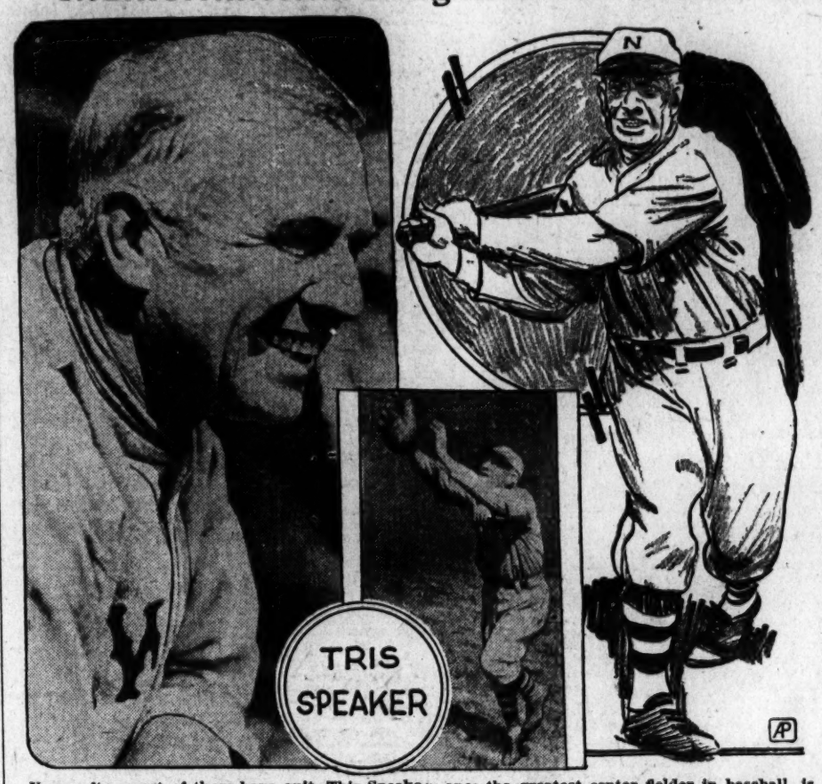
Tris Speaker, at 41, Flashing Comeback In International League With .370 Mark



Years after most of them have quit, This Speaker, once the greatest center fielder in baseball, is playing daily and is making a big success of it. The Grey Eagle, who is 41, is near the .370 mark in batting for the Newark Club which he manages.

By JAY VESSELS
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—That big black bat of Tris Speaker's which American League pitchers silenced last year is flashing a comeback in the International League this summer.

Playing right field for Newark, Tris has been hitting around .370, an average attained under the handicap of injuries and the heavy side duties of a playing manager.

When American League hurling last year held Tris to a batting mark of .267, the lowest in twenty years as a big leaguer, things looked dark for the Grey Eagle. The outlook for the great old player was not helped any when Philadelphia released him unconditionally. But Tris was not without a baseball connection very long. Newark signed him as manager at a reported salary of $25,000.

Tris started out as a regular, but injuries sent him back to the bench, and he was out of the game for six weeks. He finally got back into fair playing shape for a man who admits 41 years and began slugging the ball at a lively clip.

In 120 times at bat in 43 games Tris made 44 hits and scored 34 runs for a rating of .367.

Speaker, although slowed up by age and leg injuries, has been playing a presentable game afield. Those great Speaker style catches that had Cleveland fans worshiping their Tris aren't forthcoming any more. Yet there aren't many fly chasers in the International that rate ahead of the old American League star in a defensive way, or an offensive way either for that matter.

The Grey Eagle, knowing baseball and baseball players as he does, still is confident of his ability to give Newark a winning club. He is pounding ahead the best he can with the outfit he has this year with hopes of swinging new material for a general reorganization next spring.

PITT BREAKS RECORD AT MANOR

Turns in Card of 68; Tomahawk Cup to Stoddard.

HARRY G. PITT former Middle Atlantic champion, yesterday established a new record for the Manor course, playing the eighteen holes in 68, 35 out and 33 in, three strokes under par. He had birdies on the third and ninth holes, but took one stroke over par on the second when he three-putted the green. On the homeward journey he had birdies on the thirteenth and sixteenth holes. His score was aided by four one-putt greens. He was playing with C. M. Wright, W. L. S. King and H. Willard and holed all putts. His card, with the par of the course:

	Out—								In—

Competition for the Tomahawk Cup at the Indian Spring Club, 72 holes, medal play, handicap allowance, has resulted in a victory for Commander S. K. Stoddard, who had four rounds of 94—84—87—78 and a net 271. I. J. Henderson, with cards of 97—93—92—88, had a net 272, one stroke behind the winner. R. A. Bryant finished with a net 279 and Donald McNeale had a net 280.

Mrs. Haynes Scores 80 From Columbia's Back Tees.

Mrs. J. M. Haynes, former District champion, yesterday negotiated the Columbia Club course in an even 80, 39 out and 41 in. She was playing with Fred McLeod, the club professional, and all drives were from the back tees. On the seventeenth tee she had two 4s for a 77, but unfortunately her tee shot landed the ball in the ditch and she holed out in 6. On the eighteenth hole she was just off the edge of the green with her second, but chipped 6 feet above the hole and then took two putts for a 5. Her card:

Almost the Naked Truth

By JAMES S. COLLINS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Excepting a few carefree souls who wouldn't worry if the crack of doom knocked the plaster off all the ceilings in the United States and its possessions, the folks in the stitched horsehide racket are deeply concerned over the slim attendance at some of the major league ball parks this season. On many occasions the turnstile count has been so low as to suggest that somebody might have plastered the outer wall of the park with bubonic plague quarantine signs. All the diagnosticians are trying to dope out the cause of this distressing condition.

Some observers see in the attenuated figures a sign that the national game is losing its grip on the populace. But it is significant that teams like the Cubs, which are able to send thrills or chills chasing up and down the customer's marrow, have no difficulty in luring him to the park.

Situation Desperate In Some Cities.

Indeed, it is quite likely that the aggregate attendance in either league for the season will equal or even exceed that of last season. But that does not refute the assertion that the situation in some cities is desperate. Were it not for the swag they collect in the more prosperous cities some of the weaker clubs would have had to shut up shop long ago. The stronger clubs, on the other hand, are getting weary of taking the mere pittance they get as their share of the scanty receipts of games played in the weaker centers.

The truth of the matter seems to be that both leagues are top-heavy. There is too wide a gap between the leaders and the stragglers. The disparity in class between two such teams as, say, the Philadelphia Athletics and the Boston Red Sox is actually painful to contemplate. This theory does not seem to hold in all cases, however. Until recently the St. Louis Cardinals had a chance to win the pennant, and they are still in the upper four, but the home patronage has been poor all season. Dissatisfaction with the policies of the ownership may have something to do with it in this case.

Weak Clubs' Privileges in Draft Insufficient.

Several years ago the magnates took one important step toward effecting a semblance of balance between the strong and the weak clubs. They changed the draft regulations to provide that the weak clubs, in the order of their weakness, get the call on minor league players subject to the draft. A striking example of the effect of that policy is the case of Hack Wilson and the Chicago Cubs. Wilson, who played with Toledo in 1925, was subject to the draft and practically every club in the majors was after him. The Cubs, who finished last in the National League, got the prize, and look. Mr. McGraw, where they are today, thanks, in great measure, to that same Mr. Wilson.

The magnates also voted to extend this preferential treatment to the weaker clubs in waiving players from one league to another. Today, when two clubs in his league claim a player upon whom waivers have been asked, the one lower in the league standing gets him. If he is waived by all the clubs in his own league, the right of clubs in the other league Shores' Relief Hurling Saves Game; Score, 6 to 5.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The Athletics made it two straight over the Indians today when Young Bill Shores choked off a ninth inning rally after George Earnshaw had been batted from the box.

With the winning run on base, Shores disposed of Averill and Fonseca, two of Cleveland's best hitters, and the Mackmen pocketed a 6-to-5 victory.

Max Haas, Philadelphia centerfielder, was out of the game with an injured arm, the result of being hit by a pitched ball in Wednesday's game.

PASCUMA, HURT IN FALL, UNLIKELY TO RIDE AGAIN

Knee Crushed In Jam at Barrier

McLean Jockey Done as Rider After Spill, Doctors Say.

Amputation Averted; Had Notable Career for 3 Years.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Anthony Pascuma, 23-year-old jockey, probably has ridden in his last race.

A broken leg received in a fall from his mount here today put the jockey in the Saratoga Hospital, with the doctor's verdict that his riding days were over. Caught in a jam, when nineteen juveniles broke from the barrier in the opening race, Pascuma was hurled from his mount, W. S. Kilmer's Dark Goddess, and before he could free his foot from the stirrup, his knee was crushed by the hoofs of the charging horses.

It was at first thought it would be necessary to amputate the leg, but a later investigation showed an operation unnecessary. Attending physicians, however, stated that if the knee healed, he would never be able to bend it again.

Pascuma's injury was by far the most serious of the current meeting, which ends August 31. Pascuma started his big time riding three seasons ago at New Orleans, La., later joining E. B. McLean's Stable, riding in the West last year. He came East at the opening of the 1929 season, where he has been doing free lance riding successfully. He was to have reported to Trainer Schorr, of the McLean Stable, at the start of the Maryland season.

Pascuma rode Blue Larkspur to victory last year in the Great American, the National Stallion Stakes and the Saratoga Special. He was astride the 3-year-old champion again when he finished second in the Hopeful.

Beau Wrack Wins in Romp In Claiming Stakes.

The Mohawk Claiming Stakes, with a value of $3,150 to the winner, was won by Sagamore Stable's Beau Wrack, which made a show of his company here today. Beau Wrack, which has never shown much sprinting ability, simply brezed to his field. He paid 7 to 2. G. D. Widener's Griffin was second, and Mrs. W. Knapp's Count Palatine third. Please, favorite, finished fourth.

There were six starters. They were off to a good start with Beau Wrack and Please going to the front. Please held Beau Wrack for 3 furlongs and then dropped back, while Beau Wrack opened a ten-length lead. He breezed along from eight to ten lengths in front. There was no change in the stretch, and Beau Wrack won eased up by ten lengths. Griffin took the place by two lengths from Count Palatine, while Please was fourth, a head back.

The time was 1:39 1-5.

Nats Option Pitcher Cates to Allentown

Howard Cates, southpaw pitcher obtained by the Nationals from Baltimore, who recently underwent a tonsil operation after having collapsed in the box while pitching for Columbia, where the Nats had him on option, has been sent out again by the Washington Club. He left yesterday for Allentown, of the Eastern League, where he will finish out the season.

Strings have been retained on him and he will be brought back for trial next season if he shows any class in the minors. The chances are that Cates will be handicapped for a week or so, as he is still weak and about 15 pounds underweight, as a result of his recent operation.

3-YEAR-OLDS SEEK TITLE TODAY

8 Stars Go to Post in $25,000 Travers at Saratoga.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—A new reigning 3-year-old thoroughbred will be named tomorrow at Saratoga with the sixtieth running of the $25,000 Travers midsummer derby.

With Blue Larkspur out of the racing wars for the remainder of the season and Jack High still recuperating from injuries, the 3-year-old situation is as much in the air as it was before Blue Larkspur conquered the best of his age in the Withers, the Belmont and the Classic.

Eight runners have been named to challenge for the right to rule the 3-year-old division, although the list includes only one big stake winner, Dr. Freeland, of Preakness fame, the remainder is made up of colts which battled the Bradley star as he climbed the championship heights.

Dr. Freeland, Preakness Winner, To Pack 126 Pounds.

Because of his victory in the $50,000 Preakness, Dr. Freeland will pack the heavy impost of 126 pounds, 3 more than J. E. Widener's Marine, the speedy son of Man o' War, which won the Travers in 1920. The Belair Stud's Frisius is in with 120 pounds, while the Nut, from the Warm Stable; Harry Payne Whitney's Beacon Hill, the Rosedale Stable's Live Oak, R. T. Wilson jr.'s African and W. R. Coe's Dail will carry 117 pounds each.

Last year's renewal of the Travers saw Petee Wrack turn in a sensational victory over a field of four starters, including Mrs. John D. Hertz's champion, Reigh Count.

As a secondary feature to the Travers, fourteen juvenile fillies will go forth in search of the 1929 2-year-old filly championship in the $7,500 Spinway. The field includes all of the leading misses of the East, with H. C. Phipps' Adequate and Gifford A. Cochran's The Spare, a $7,200 buy as a yearling, carrying the top weights of 122 pounds.

TIGERS PLAY KAUFMANS.

The Takoma Tigers, in final preparation for their opening in the Montgomery County series with Rockville tomorrow, will engage the D. J. Kaufmans today on the Silver Spring diamond at 4 o'clock.

All Tigers are requested to report. Pope, Skinner and Duffy will divide on the mound to get in a final workout before tomorrow's encounter with Rockville.

POLYGAMOUS broke slow, but went up with a rush, made RACCOON and CAMP BOSS stop, then drew away to win easily. CAMP BOSS, on outside, ran a good race. RACCOON broke running, showed good speed, but tired as if short. HI GLOSS ran a good race. RENTIVA is worth remembering in cheaper company.

Dodgers Obtain Warner In Trade With Toledo

New York, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—The Brooklyn Dodgers announced today the purchase of Jack Warner, shortstop, from the Toledo Club, of the American Association. As part of the deal Max Rosenfeld, outfielder, has been released to Toledo under one-year option. Warner formerly was with the Tigers.

Tilden Going to London To Appear on Stage

London, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Bill Tilden is coming to England at the end of September to appear in a play, "They all want something," B. A. Meyer, producer, announced today.

"It is just possible that if he likes London sufficiently and the play is a success, Tilden will combine coaching young lawn tennis players with acting," Meyer added.

CONNIE MACK STARS IN FIELD BY PROXY

to center in the third which will have to be charged as an error to Mr. Mack. He had the direction right, but he misjudged the length of the drive and it came up to Miller on the bounce. But when Luke Sewell raised one to left, Simmons was just about there. Joe Shaute also-guessed Mr. Mack in this inning, hitting a low fly to left, straight at Simmons, but short of him. Morgan bounced a long one against the right field wall, too, but I claim that should be no contest as far as Mr. Mack is concerned. You can't hang your outfielders upon these high walls.

In the fifth, Miller was just where Gardner's fly came down. All this while, Homer Summa was shifting hither and yon in the outfield, waiting for trade and in the sixth, he ran in to collaborate with Bishop and Miller on a short fly from Joe Sewell. Mr. Mack had not one employe but three, on his spot, and Summa officiated.

Averill hit a single to right, but it was a grounder and you can't put men under grounders. Fonseca hit a fly, though, ending the inning, and Summa stood where the old gent had put him, to take it.

Old Boy Picking Spots For His Forces.

Never having checked up on such matters before, I can't say whether anything uncanny was going on out there or not. It is nothing startling to see outfielders hanging around where fly balls come down, still, the old boy was picking the spots and deploying the forces from a post of command that didn't afford a very good perspective. He was just going by what he knew of the hitters' habits and going very well, too.

Things went along about the same in the seventh. Summa was under Falk's fly and Hodapp's single went straight at Simmons, but along the ground. Two pinch hitters, Hauser and Jamieson, walked. Morgan hit a single to center, but again the ball hugged the ground and two men scored, Giddings Hodapp and Hauser.

In the eighth, Miller was in line for Morgan's single, but this was a grounder. The only soaring ball of the inning was Falk's, and Miller took it in his pants pocket.

Porter's Single Another Error for Mack.

Porter's single in the ninth was another error for the Philadelphia bossman. Myatt's fly went straight to Summa, scoring Tavener, who had walked. Morgan hit a single to right, but the customers were much upset by the doings and I fell to watching the ball game myself and can't state just how that one was.

But check them to here if you are curious about the old fellow's outfielding average for a typical ball game, allowing that grounders can't be caught on the fly. The whole scene leaves an impression that Connie Mack had a workman on the job where there was work to be done many more times than he didn't, and if the figures bear out the impression maybe that is marvelous. On the other hand, maybe it isn't. The outfielders might have picked their locations just as well themselves if Connie Mack had left it to them.

two hits which gave the White Sox victory.

Tate's Double Starts Nats' First Rally.

Washington was the first to score, Tate doubling to left to start the second, moving to third on Gooch's single and coming home on Hayes' sacrifice fly to center. Three singles and a base on balls in the fourth allowed the White Sox to score the two runs which overcame this early lead.

Judge tied the score in the seventh, singling to left to start the inning, going to second on Rice's sacrifice and coming home when Goslin lined a single to center.

The White Sox bore down upon Burke with a vengeance in the seventh, Cissell getting a walk with one down and scoring on the home run which Reynolds parked in the lower deck of the left-field stands. Shires doubled inside first and went to third on an error by Cronin which allowed Hoffmann to reach first. After Kamm had popped to Judge, Kerr lifted a pop fly to Rice, but Rice let the ball get away from him for a two-base error, Kerr reaching second and Shires and Hoffmann scoring.

Goslin Again Ties Score With Single.

Washington came back in the eighth to tie up the score again. Gooch leading off with a single to left, going to third on Cronin's single to right and scoring on Hayes' sacrifice fly to right field.

Boss batted for Burke and was safe at first when Kerr bobbled his grounder, Cronin going to second. Judge was an easy infield out, but Rice did his duty by slipping a lone double to the corner of the left-field stands, which scored Cronin and Boss. Goslin tied the score, as he had in the seventh, by singling to right to bring Rice home. Tate singled to left, but both he and Goslin died on the sacks when West lifted a long fly to left field.

PIXLEE NAMES G. W. BASEBALL, TRACK COACHES

Grid Mentor Undecided Upon

Farrington to Handle Diamonders, Sexton Track Coach.

11 Letter Men Due to Return for Football Team.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the appointment of additional coaches did not materialize at George Washington University yesterday but James E. Pixlee, director of athletics and professor of physical education, did reveal his selections for the baseball and track coaching assignments for next spring.

Max Farrington, Pixlee's first assistant, will coach the Colonial diamond team and Jean Sexton, who already has been given charge of intramural athletics, will tutor the cinder path artists, the director stated. Both Farrington and Sexton were pupils under Pixlee at Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., from which Pixlee resigned to accept the George Washington post a few months ago.

It had been expected that Pixlee would announce the appointment of new coaches to handle the varsity football team this fall, but the director encountered several problems in his investigation of the candidates and found it necessary to postpone definite action until early next week.

Varsity and Frosh Gridmen May Drill Separately.

At that time Pixlee probably also will announce the practice program to be followed by the freshmen and varsity gridmen. He is contemplating different hours for the drilling of the two classes.

Eleven letter men will report with the candidates for the varsity team when the training call is issued three weeks hence. They are Babe Clapper, Sam Berkowitz, John Clements and Vernon Frazier, backs; Steele McGrew and Harmon Frances, ends; Bevo Miller, Dan Eberly and Channing Davis, tackles; and Mel Frazier and Calvin Rodgers, guards. Others to report who were members of the varsity squad last year are Dave Coombs, back; Burr Christopher, tackle; Justine Edgerton and Robert Rollins, guards, and Jack Purdy, an end, who showed enough promise last season to warrant the prediction that he will put up a strong bid for a regular wing berth this fall.

George Washington will play eight games this season, five in Washington. Central High School Stadium probably will be the scene of the home contests. There is a possibility, however, that the Colonials will secure a playing field of their own.

Colonials to Open Season Against Manhattan College.

The opening game will be with Manhattan College of New York City on a local gridiron October 5. Following will come American University here, October 12; Dickinson College, at Carlisle, Pa., October 19; City College of New York, at New York City, October 26; William and Mary College, at Williamsburg, Va., November 2; St. Joseph's College, of Philadelphia, here, November 9; Juniata College, of Huntingdon, Pa., here, November 16, and the annual clash with Catholic University on Thanksgiving Day. The last mentioned will be staged on a neutral field, probably Griffith Stadium.

Geo. Wash. Post Plays At Annapolis Monday

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Aug. 16.—The local Rotary Club's junior baseball team, which recently engaged in a city series with the Civitan Club's Cardinals, next Monday afternoon will clash with the George Washington Post, of Washington, at the Annapolis Baseball Park.

The Rotary Team is now coached by "Hump" Holidayoke, star twirler of the Rescue Hose Company Team, who has assisted Charley Kotsch in the legion series and city junior title. It is likely that Doc Donaldson, crack twirler for the Civitans, who pitched them to the junior title, will be borrowed by the Rotary for the game.

The Washington team today was eliminated from the Eastern finals of the legion championship and a lively encounter is anticipated.

D. C. PLAYERS NEAR TWO TITLES

Miss Wakeford and Martinez W. Md. Finalists.

Special to The Washington Post.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK, Md., Aug. 16.—B. F. Arkle, blonde ace of Wheeling, bore off Western Maryland titular tennis honors at the expense of Marion Rinehart, powerful Pittsburgher, in an impressive straight-set exhibition on the gallery court of the Women's Civic Club here this afternoon. The verdict read 6—3, 6—0, 6—2, but really fails to tell the story of Rinehart's brilliancy in spots, the ever-consistent Arkle checkmating his opponent's flashier game with truly airtight mound covering.

Arkle, with his townsman, Fred Selby, also trimmed Rinehart in the men's doubles and semifinals, 6—3, 6—4, the Stanton star pairing with George Sawin, another Pittsburgh luminary. Lobs turned the trick. In the opposite half of the dual draw, Sam Cohn and A. O. Smith, West Virginia State champions, outplayed Billy Ramsay, Uniontown slasher, and "Tack" Hammer, accomplished Greensburger, 6—2, 7—5.

Miss Wakeford Battles for Women's Title Today.

Miriam Sullivan, Pittsburgh Athletic Association satellite, pushed Marywill Wakeford, brilliant Washington driver, to the limit in the opening set of their women's semifinal tilt, but lacked the experience to stay along with her clever foe and succumbed, 6—4, 6—0.

Miss Wakeford will meet Margaret Carspecken, spectacular Morgantown volleyer, for the title tomorrow morning. Miss Carspecken overcame a 5-to-2 lead to defeat Mrs. Ruth Martinez, hard-hitting Washingtonian, in the other semifinal fray.

Miss Carspecken and Miss Sullivan attained the women's doubles final, their victims being the Pittsburgh-Baltimore duo of Betty Wattles and Mrs. Winchester, 6—2, 6—4, and Miss Wakeford and Mrs. Graham, of Washington, 4—6, 10—8, 6—3. They will clash with Mrs. Martinez and Dolly Harris, an Edgewood girl, tomorrow.

The summaries:

Sandlot Managers Shuffle Line-Ups in Two Leagues

ONE glance at the rosters of the six contending teams serves to convince every one associated with Capital City sandlot baseball that the week-day league series that opens Monday at the Terminal Y diamond will be the most spirited since the inauguration of these series. The series will get under way without a favorite having been picked.

Naval Hospital, victor in the Departmental League, will meet Union Printers, champions of the Government League, in the initial contest Monday at 4 o'clock. Inaugural ceremonies will be staged to the accompaniment of the Navy Band. Arrangements have been made to seat 1,500 persons, seats having been secured through the courtesy of Clark C. Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club.

In the eligibility lists appearing below, many of the most talented players of the sandlots are included. The Naval Hospital Nine is spotted with men of high caliber, including Ingram, Hicks, Crews, Rumboldt and others; the Union Printers have their old guard of Desper, Hutchinson, Simons, Roudabush, Edwards, Lowery and Webb, while the other teams have players of exceptional worth too numerous to mention who have made it possible for their teams to be "up there" and able to compete in the series.

The eligibility lists follow:

In a final effort to strengthen their teams for the heated championship race now in progress in the unlimited section of the Capital City League, rival managers have shuffled their line-ups. No further changes in team rosters will be permitted. Wednesday at midnight marked the closing hour for newcomers.

After an intensive search for another experienced pitcher, Manager Frank Cinotti, of the St. Joseph Team, signed Jeff Smith, who has just recovered from an appendicitis operation. Jeff has assured the Saint pilot that he is ready for regular work.

The Brentwood Hawks have gathered Bennie Womersley and George Ray Francis into the fold. Womersley is a veteran of many campaigns and a heavy slugger in addition to a star southpaw hurler. Francis has had a big season with the Kennedy A. C., boosting twelve wins in his last thirteen starts.

Joe Much, manager of the Miller Aztecs, has the call on services of Pete Ingram, ace of the Naval Hospital Team; Babe Clapper, who has been doing sensational mound work for the Hyattsville Nine, and Willie Wolf, diminutive outfielder of Central High fame.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

Alexandria, Va., Aug. 16.—The first call of the football season for practice has been issued by Manager Pat Gorman, of the Virginia Athletic Club, who has requested all players to report at the Shipyard Field Sunday morning at 10 o'clock.

Manager Gorman has been working on the schedule for the Virginians since June 1, with the net result of one game listed with the Fort Washington Team, and several other major attractions pending.

Prex Wilson, former coach of the Alexandria High School, and now coach of the Washington-Lee High, will assume complete charge of the Virginians. He will be assisted by Buck Beach, veteran player, who last year was the mainstay of the organization. "Mouse" Briscoe, considered one of the best back field men in this section, will be seen in action with the Virginians, as will "Dippy" Simpson, Leo Lyons, Robey, Stitts, Gettle, Brown, Buck Beach, Butler, Cornell, Phillips, Williams and many others whose names will be announced by the management later. The only star of last year's team who will be missing from the line-up will be George Beach, who will attend Hargrave Military Academy this fall. He was one of the best centers in this section while playing with the Virginians.

A's Preparing Park For World's Series

Philadelphia, Aug. 16 (A.P.).—While the management of the Philadelphia Athletics is shooing away all applications for world's series tickets on the ground that the team has not yet won the American League pennant, preparations for the October classic are in evidence.

Photographers' stands are being built on the right and left field sides of the grand stand and the work is being pushed. Heretofore photographers were permitted on the field.

WEIGHTMAN VICTOR ON TRACK

Playground Meet Is Decided by Two-Point Margin.

WITH only 8 points separating five of the six scoring teams, the Weightman Playground team yesterday won the Northwestern Conference meet, the last of the sectional games before the municipal playground department's city meet on the Plaza Playgrounds next Wednesday, in which The Washington Post's medals and cups will be at stake.

At the Cooke Playgrounds yesterday, Weightman ran up a string of 37 points to nose out Adams which amassed a total of 35. Cooke and Happy Hollow, neighborhood rivals, were tied for third place with 31 points, while Bancroft, with 30 points, beat out Johnson, which scored 16 points, for fifth place.

It was Weightman's second straight conference victory and was not unexpected. However, the showings of the Bancroft and Johnson teams came as a distinct surprise. Bancroft stepped into the lead with the running of the lighter events but weakness in the relays dimmed its chances of winning.

Weightman Profits By 3rd Places.

Lennon, Harper and Harrison did the bulk of the scoring for Weightman, although the latter profited by a number of third places. Cooke and Adams were afforded an opportunity of tying if not beating Weightman by taking top places in the half-mile run. Cooke, however, failed to place and Chew, of Adams, was third. The event was won by Tabler, one of Bancroft's bright stars.

Wallace Bloyer, of Adams, was the individual star of the meet. He accounted for 13 points, winning the 70-yard dash and the running broad jump and finishing second in the running high jump. Bloyer is in the unlimited class and gives Adams a prospective point-scorer for the city meet where he will probably pick the 100-yard dash as his event.

The relays provided some of the keenest action of the meet. The feature, the unlimited relay, was won by the Happy Hollow team composed of Pisciotta, Sullivan, Scanlon and Rany. Sullivan's victory in the unlimited running high jump stamps him as a city meet threat. He will carry the colors of Happy Hollow.

50-YARD DASH—Won by N. Ritzenberg (Cooke); second, A. Ritzenberg (Cooke); third, Finnelli (Weightman).

RUNNING BROAD JUMP—Won by McHugh (Bancroft); second, Scafide (Cooke); third, N. Ritzenberg (Cooke).

53 Football Candidates Seek Berths on C. U. Team

First Practice Due Soon After Labor Day; Out-of-Town Camp Considered; Coach McAuliffe to Name Assistant.

FIFTY-THREE players, composing the largest squad called for early practice in recent years, will report to Head Coach Jack McAuliffe, of Catholic University, for preseason training shortly after Labor Day. All of the 1928 varsity squad, excepting Capt. Jim Schmidt, half back, and "Happy" Conveigh, reserve back, both of whom graduated, will be in the group.

McAuliffe may yet decide to take his charges to an out-of-town camp instead of drilling them here, as has been reported. He is now attending the Harvard summer coaching school at Cambridge, but will return within ten days. On the trip south, he may inspect a camp site in Connecticut with the view to establishing training quarters there.

New Backfield Coach to Be Selected.

The Cardinal head coach will appoint an assistant to coach the backfield players before training opens, it is said. Myles Lane, former Dartmouth star, who was sought for this position earlier in the summer, will not be the man. He is reported to have asked a bigger salary than the Brookland institution wanted to pay. The tenure of office of the assistant will be only about twelve weeks.

Eddie Lafond, Catholic University alumnus and one of the Cardinals' best guards in his day, will return as coach of the freshmen eleven. So far he has learned but little of the incoming first-year squad. His 1928 freshmen were undefeated and unscored on.

Eddie Kane and Johnny Oliver, members of Lafond's team last fall, are regarded fine prospects for regular varsity jobs this season. Kane likely will be Joe Champa's warmest rival for one of the half back positions, while Oliver has a big chance of earning many assignments in the quarter back role hitherto occupied exclusively by Gene Murphy. Since neither Murphy nor Oliver is exceptionally strong physically, it is more than likely that they will divide the work as the regular signal barker.

Four District Players Are On List.

Four Washington youths are among the group slated to report for preseason training. They are George Menke, varsity guard; Mike Durso, substitute center; John Hickey, 1928 freshmen tackle, and Joseph De Bettencourt.

Following are the players who will report to Coach McAuliffe for early training:

Howard J. Alberque, Bridgefield Park, N. J.; Rocco R. Biasi, Newark, N. J.; Theodore C. Bonetti, Springfield, Mass.; Edgar S. Campbell, Auburn, Mass.; John P. Cavanaugh, Bridgeport, Conn.; John J. Cavanaugh, Holyoke, Mass.; Joseph A. Champa, Eveleth, Minn.; Charles F. Chenworth, Wilmington, N. C.; Raymond G. Clemens, Dayton, Ohio; Dennis F. Collins, Elizabeth, N. J.; Joseph T. DeBettencourt, Washington, D. C.; Carl E. DeMello, Stoneham, Mass.; Daniel P. D'Esopo, Hartford, Conn.; Leonard A. Despres, Lawrence, Mass.; Michael D. Devin, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Thomas L. Dundin, Hartford, Conn.; Michael J. Durso, Washington, D. C.

Felix P. Farris, Beckley, W. Va.; Francis X. Fullam, New York, N. Y.; Stephen J. Gazdica, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Oscar Gerth, Elkins Park, Pa.; Fred R. Guarnieri, Warren, Ohio; Charles J. Hennessey, Buffalo, N. Y.; John R. Hickey, Washington, D. C.; Edward H. Kane, Worcester, Mass.; John H. Lyons, Philadelphia, Pa.; Charles McAree, Haverhill, Mass.; Thomas McCabe, New Britain, Conn.; John T. McGrath, Scranton, Pa.; Walter J. McNamara, Bridgeport, Conn.; John J. Malevich, Eveleth, Minn.; Clarence Martin, Martinsburg, W. Va.; Michael M. Marucci, Oranse, N. J.; George V. Menke, Washington, D. C.; Nicholas Monaco, Newark, N. J.; Francis R. Mullen, West Hartford, Conn.; Eugene X. Murphy, Manchester, N. H.; James H. Nugent, Swissvale, Pa.; Edward D. O'Brien, New Britain, Conn.; Vincent P. Walter, Akron, Ohio; Michael J. O'Connor, Newark, N. J.; Robert E. O'Connor, Newark, N. J.; Harold J. Ogden, Hartford, Conn.; John D. Oliver, Fitchburg, Mass.; Louis M. Oros, Bridgeport, Conn.; Thomas J. Rasusa, Ansonia, Conn.; Armand J. Raiche, Manchester, N. H.; William A. Reilly, Haverstraw, N. Y.; William J. Selhorst, Coldwater, Ohio; George A. Smith, Dallas, Tex.; Michael Sweeney, Waterbury, Conn.; Pasquale R. Uricchio, Hartford, Conn.; Ferdinand Vezzosi, Newark, N. J.; James P. Ward, Bridgeport, Conn., and Ross R. Zeno, Akron, Ohio.

Reece Hair, former University of Virginia mound star, will pitch for the Cherries in an effort to upset the Celtics. Hair, who has won his last nine starts, will probably be opposed by Lefty Hamilton.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

Thanks to the tireless zeal of that indefatigable space-grabber, Mr. Hardie Meakin, I find it possible to divulge the list of tentative bookings for the Fox Theater during the weeks that stretch away into October, but not necessarily to be presented in the order named—the bookings, not the weeks.

For the first time in the local history of the articulate screen, I believe, two musical pictures are to be shown in succession at the Fox. Following "Words and Music," opening today, the attraction will be "Why Leave Home," the musicalized version of "Cradle Snatchers," with which the Capital already is familiar in both stage and silent photoplay forms. Walter Catlett, famous comedian, last seen here as costar of "Rio Rita," Sue Carol, Helen Twelvetrees and Charles Eaton, will lead the cast.

Then comes "The Cock-Eyed World," concerning which your attention is directed to tomorrow's big motion picture section of the big Sunday Post, 5c at all newsstands, order your copy early, where it is more or less exhaustively treated in the big Sunday lead, set in 8 point, C & L C, double col. measure—if you know what I mean.

For "Anniversary Week," which I am given to understand falls somewhere about the middle of September, "Salute" will be the feature This is the Fox picture filmed at West Point and Annapolis, with George O'Brien, Helen Chandler and Stepin Fetchit the stellar members of the cast. It was during the making of this special at the Naval Academy that Stepin Fetchit, the droll Senegambian, visited Washington, A. W. O. L., in quest of $20.

Then we are to see, too, "They Had to See Paris," Homer Croy's novel dramatized for the silver sheet by Owen Davis, with Will Rogers starred under the direction of Frank Borzage, maker of "Seventh Heaven," "Street Angel" and "Lucky Star."

Lenore Ulric, supported by Louis Wolheim, Robert Frazer, Ulrich Haupt and Anders Randolf in Allan Dwan's production of "Frozen Justice;" Janet Gaynor, Mary Duncan, Charles Morton and Barry Norton in F. W. Murnau's "Four Devils," taken back to the studios and made articulate with dialogue sequences since its first release, and Lola Lane, Paul Page and Kenneth Thomson, in "The Girl From Havana," actually Movietoned on shipboard and in Havana, complete the list confided to this desk.

Quite a parcel of entertainment, if you ask me.

A post card message from Milton Davis, formerly Stanley-Crandall ace organist, informs me that he is still presiding at the console of one of the largest instruments in the world at the new Warner Theater on the Boardwalk in Atlantic City. The picture of the theater indicates it to be about the size of the Mojave Desert, but nowhere near so simple in design.

About the time of the Spanish-American War, America's foremost song writer was Paul Dresser. His "Blue and The Grey" was one of the greatest popular successes ever ground off the presses. About the time this melodic burst of patriotism was at its height, a timid blonde walked into his office one day and asked that he listen to her sing a few of his compositions. He did, and forthwith hied the young woman to a booking office where he at once secured extended engagements for the girl he described as "my little sister," just to make it more impressive.

That is the way in which Louise Dresser, long one of the most capable songsters of the American stage, and formerly the wife of Jack Norworth, the singing comedian, came by the name which has clung to her ever since.

This is recalled to mind by the announcement that Miss Dresser is cast in the role of Dolores Costello's mother in "The Madonna of Avenue A," current at the Earle Theater. I only hope she does as good a job as she did in a similar part with Madge Bellamy in "Mother Knows Best."

It seems that they have managed the matter of Dolores Del Rio's slight accent with considerable skill in planning her first all-talking picture which, incidentally, is to be her next release.

The title is "The Bad One," the locale France, and Miss Del Rio is cast as a French cabaret singer—thereby making a place for the Del Rio singing voice in logical fashion.

The story was adapted from an original by John Farrow and it is hinted that despite the star's protestations to the contrary during her Washington visit, Edwin Carewe may again direct. That, however, will not be definitely determined until Mr. Carewe returns from Europe, whence he has already sailed.

Elsie Janis has been signed by Paramount to contribute "material, ideas and talent and to supervise production" of a feature now in preparation at the Hollywood plant, according to announcement by Jesse L. Lasky, vice president in charge of production. The title and details of the production are not disclosed.

Neither is any reason why this should go on beyond here.

Today's True Detective Story

The Warehouse Mystery

By VANCE WYNN

Do you remember Ali Baba and the adventure of the 40 thieves. If so, keep the incident in mind and you may get a clue to the mystery contained in the veracious tale which follows.

It was in November, 1905, that the warehouse of the Security Storage Co., in New York City, was robbed of a large amount of rare and valuable bric-a-brac.

Never was there anything like it in the history of the New York Police Department. The company in question prided itself upon its ability to take care of its goods. The building was fireproof and was supposed to be burglar-proof. The system of watchmen was as perfect as money and human ingenuity could make it. In addition to this the superintendent had a method of his own by which he checked up on his employes.

How were the goods stolen?

It was demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that no one had broken into the building during the night. The shutters were of steel and every window was barred by iron fasteners. Not a bar was twisted and not a shutter had been disturbed. Besides this, every door leading into the warehouse had been guarded by faithful watchmen who had been in the employ of the company for years and who were fully trusted.

It was neither an inside nor an outside job.

It is no wonder that the detective who was placed on the case said that it was too "spooky" for a healthy man to handle.

Nevertheless, he handled it and in a way that won the unreserved commendation of his superior officers.

After he had interviewed all of the watchmen, he called the chief delivery man into the office of the storage company and questioned him at length. After that he interviewed the man who received the goods when they came in at the front door. As a result of these two talks he began to see a ray of light.

He was told that while most of the customers of the house stored their stuff by the year or the month, there were cases where goods were only left for a week, and sometimes only a day at a time.

One of the curious things about the robbery was that most of the stolen articles were small. Quality rather than quantity seemed to be the watchword of the thieves. In this connection it may be said that the solution of the great mystery came exactly one hour after the police had been notified.

"Tell me," said the detective who was doing the investigating, "what came into the warehouse just before closing time last night?"

The receiving clerk pondered for a moment and then replied:

"Two large packing boxes. They were brought here last night with the understanding that they would be taken away the first thing in the morning. The driver said he had missed the boat by which they were to be shipped and wanted to leave them here overnight instead of hauling them away to the other end of Brooklyn."

"Have they gone?"

"Yes, they were taken away just after we opened. They could not have gone more than twenty minutes ago. They were taken away in a truck."

The moment he heard these words the detective started everybody into action. That wagon must be traced at all hazards. By rare good fortune the policeman on the beat had seen the team. The man on the next beat had also noticed it. In the end it was found backing up in front of an old shack near the river front. The detective permitted the men to unload the truck.

Then he hustled into the place with pistol ready. Those inside surrendered at once. Securing hatchet and chisel, the detective proceeded to open the boxes. The first one contained the stolen gods. When the lid was taken off the second one a man crept out, dirty and disheveled.

He had been smuggled into the warehouse in the box and had food and drink to see him through the night. He had stolen the stuff and then crept back into the second box, which closed with an automatic lock.

SEARS, ROEBUCK CO. TO OPEN NEW STORE

Bladensburg Road Unit Will Display 40,000 Items Wednesday.

FIFTY-SECOND IN NATION

Washington will have a new retail department store and the first complete one to be opened here in years, when Sears, Roebuck & Co. throws wide the doors of its establishment on Bladensburg road, two blocks north of Fifteenth and H streets northeast, Wednesday. Announcement of the opening was made late yesterday by F. J. Daly, store manager, who said the doors will be opened to the public on Wednesday morning.

Much interest has been expressed by residents of Washington over the opening. This is the fifty-second retail department store to be opened by the company. This store will carry approximately 40,000 items in 44 divisions. The company has several hundred smaller stores scattered over the country and those are known as "Class B stores." The store for Washington is known as a "Class A," or full retail department store.

"We are pleased to get our Washington store opened," said Mr. Daly. "We are going to open the doors at 9 o'clock on Wednesday morning and for the four opening days, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, we are going to remain open until 9 o'clock at night. This is done to give those employed during the day an opportunity to visit and inspect our new store during the evening hours."

Mr. Daly said the company has prepared three and one-half acres of ground at the store for a free parking space for automobiles of store customers. This is one of the features, he said, which the company has found much appreciated by automobile owners wherever Sears, Roebuck & Co. department stores have been located.

They say "Opportunity knocks but once." Every days the Classified columns of The Washington Post carry opportunities in most every line of business.

Circus Wild Man Eats 'Hoppers; Faces Court

Independence, Kans., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—It was all right for a Biblical John to live on locusts and wild honey in the wilderness, but when Bradford E. Judd, of Codeyville, began to bite off the heads of grasshoppers here today, using no honey whatever, bystanders called the police.

Bradford said he was a member of a circus troupe which showed here yesterday and was merely rehearsing for his wild man act. City Judge S. P. Miles ordered him to practice somewhere else.

New Electrical Line Is Completed

New Hook-Up, in Form of Circle, Is 230 Miles Long.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 16.—The Virginia Public Service Co., with headquarters in this city, announces the completion of the link in its tie line between Occoquan nad Remington, which connects all of its plants, with the exception of the steam plant at Newport News, and ties into other power companies' transmission systems at two points.

This completed circuit is in the form of a ring and is approximately 610 miles in length. The new section connects the company's steam plant at Ronceverte, W. Va., with the one at Alexandria, Va., by a trunk line 230 miles long. At Goshen there is another line approximately 200 miles in length, extending through southern Virginia and to Roanoke Rapids, N. C. These new lines are designed for 110,000 volts, but at this time 66,000 are being used.

The new link connects all the towns served by the Virginia Public Service Co. from Hinton to Alexandria. Six steam plants and seven hydro plants feed into this network.

The same company has also completed the installation of a carrier current telephone system which uses the transmission line conductor wire as a telephone line.

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 16.—Dr. Mosby G. There an embargo has been raised against people and foodstuffs coming from Roanoke.

Dr. Perrow is advising Lynchburg people not to take their children to Roanoke or to have visitors here from that city, but he holds that it will not be dangerous for people to pass through without making a stop there.

REPORTS OF DEATHS SPUR FIRE-FIGHTERS

Army of 2,000 Men Battles Desperately as Blazes Blacken Forests.

CASUALTIES MAY BE SIX

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—Spurred on by unconfirmed reports that forest fires in Washington had claimed three more lives, an army of nearly 2,000 men today fought desperately to bring the blazes under control.

More than 50,000 acres had been blackened in the Chelan National Forest, Okanogan and Ferry Counties in Washington.

Missing since yesterday and feared to have fallen victim to the flames, P. C. Ingraham, from the Federal district forestry office in Portland, and Ermannis St. Louise, Chelan youth, were being sought by fire crews.

The missing men had been fighting the fires in Chelan National Forest, which now have covered 18,000 acres. Word was brought to Wenatchee, center of the fire harrassed region, that an unnamed Doukhobor from Grand Forks, B. C., had been burned to death while battling fires on the Canadian side of the Colville National Forest.

Possible Toll Is Six.

If the reports are substantiated, it will bring the toll of men who have died fighting forest fires in the region to six within the last ten days.

Ludwig Karndt, a recent arrival in British Columbia from Germany, died last night in a hospital at Nelson, B. C., from injuries received while fighting the Kootenai forest fires.

Larry Larsen, 21-year-old Portland youth, was recovering in a Wenatchee hospital from serious leg injuries received when the head of an ax flew off while he was working with a fire crew.

Meanwhile the United States Army moved to assist the exhausted fire fighters. Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, commanding officer of the Ninth Corps Area at San Francisco, issued orders to the commanding officer at Fort Lewis to report to the United States forester for the district to render whatever aid is desired.

Indians Are Drafted.

Crow Indians, filled with superstitious fear of forest fires, believing that columns of smoke arising from them are infested with evil spirits, were being pressed into service today to help fight a stubborn fire in Lodge Grass Canyon, 70 miles northwest of Sheridan, Wyo.

For ten days white men under direction of Fred Agee, superintendent of the Big Horn National Forest, have been fighting the fire, and the Indians have held back. Today Reg Pierce, farmer agent for the United States Indian department, banded together a few of the more courageous Crows and under their leadership he hoped to conquer the Indians' fear of the fire, and get at least 30 members of the tribe to aid in keeping the fire under control. About one square mile of the canyon was burned over.

Kootenai District Improves.

The fire situation in the Kootenai district in British Columbia was reported generally improved, but fires in the Kelso and Lardo districts were causing concern.

In northern Idaho the situation was reported the best in a week.

The White Mountain fire in the Cascades in central Washington continued to spread rapidly. The Big Chelan fire added 6,000 acres in the last two days to the devastated area. The Remmel Peak fire, near the international border, was reported to be spreading after sweeping 10,000 acres.

Falls Church Boy Injured by Bus

Child Said to Have Fallen From Bicycle Onto Motor Coach.

Daniel Brown, 10 years old, of Falls Church, Va., was seriously injured yesterday afternoon when he is said to have fallen from his bicycle onto the hub of a Washington-Virginia-Maryland Coach Co., bus on the Lee Highway, near the boy's home.

The bus driver, J. A. Arnell, told Arlington County police that Brown had been holding on a truck and that he had fallen just as the motor coach approached.

The child was taken to Georgetown University Hospital, where he was reported to be suffering from a broken left arm, bruises and possible internal injuries. Deputy Sheriffs Dick Wheeler and Clifton Crow, of Arlington County, took him to the hospital.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

COUNTIES' FIREMEN TO COMPETE TODAY

Volunteers to Vie in Hook-Up Contest for Browne Cups at Chevy Chase.

CHURCH SALE PRICE SET

Nearly a score of volunteer fire companies from Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Md., and Arlington County, Va., are expected to take part today in the annual hook-up competition for the Dudley Browne cups, at 2 o'clock on Oliver street, between Cedar Parkway and Wisconsin avenue, Chevy Chase. The Chevy Chase Volunteer Fire Department, winner of both cups last year, will be host to the visiting competitors.

The cups, presented last year by Chief Browne, of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department, are, one for the volunteer companies of Montgomery County, and the other free for all volunteer companies in the Washington suburban district. Under the terms of the donor, either cup becomes the permanent property of the company winning it three times.

The presentation to the winners will be made by Chief Engineer George S. Watson, of the Washington Fire Department, and the judges will be Battalion Chief T. B. Stanton, Sergt. W. L. Hurley and Private Irving Hall, of the Washington department.

A committee of the Chevy Chase Fire Board, composed of M. C. Shield, L. L. Morrill, William L. Orem, jr., Marvin Farrington, William Hughes and Chief William F. Lanahan, is in charge of arrangements.

Following announcement in Baltimore Thursday that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company is planning an enlargement of the freight facilities for the Takoma Park-Silver Spring area, J. Bond Smith, corporation counsel of the town of Takoma Park, who, with Lucius Q. C. Lamar and Cissel & Woodward, is representing the municipality in its fight against the North Takoma siding of the railroad, issued the following statement:

"The B. & O. Railroad is to be congratulated on the vision which its higher officials have displayed in dealing with the question. The solution suggested by the company is one which will best serve the interests of the town of Takoma Park, the residential area immediately affected, the business community of Takoma Park, and the railroad itself. "If the railroad's program is successful—and every indication is that it will be successful—it will immediately result in abating the existing nuisance. The residential character of the neighborhood will be preserved, and at the same time the needs of the community will be much more adequately met by taking care of the service in the existing industrial area at the Takoma, D. C., station, which is much closer to all three of the business sections of Takoma than the North Takoma siding. Existing facilities at Takoma Park, D. C., station can and doubtless will be enlarged to the extent required to take care of the Takoma Park business.

"The parks in North Takoma, including the one adjacent to the North Takoma siding, can then be developed in accordance with a comprehensive plan which will also take into consideration the elimination of the Chestnut street grade crossing. The treatment of this area is a problem over which the Federal and State authorities, including the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, the District Commissioners, the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and the county and municipal authorities are now cooperating.

"If the solution suggested by the railroad can be worked out the present litigation will, of course, be abandoned, and the problem solved in such a manner as to protect the interests of all concerned.

"Under these circumstances, I have been glad to agree to a continuance of the pending case for a period not to exceed 45 days, during which time the railroad expects to be able to acquire the additional ground necessary for the expansion of its facilities."

The railroad's plans, it is understood, include abandonment of the North Takoma siding, enlargement of freight handling facilities both adjacent to the Takoma Park, D. C., station, and at Silver Spring to provide for the railroad growth of each of these towns, and also to allow for the handling of freight at Silver Spring for northwest and north Washington City and western Montgomery County.

The Rev. Henry K. Pasma, pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Rockville, whose present site is wanted by the county commissioners as a part of the proposed new county building to be erected west of the courthouse, announced yesterday that a meeting of the congregation will be called within a few days to consider the fixing of a sale price for the property, which has been in the hands of the congregation for approximately 100 years.

The trustees of the church have appointed a committee composed of Joseph Reading, chairman; Mrs. Almus R. Speare and William S. Jolliffe, to canvass Rockville in an effort to locate an available lot, and have also appointed a building committee consisting of Harold C. Smith, chairman; Judge Robert B. Peter, Almus R. Speare, Garnett Ward, John McDonald, Mrs. Theodora S. Mason and Mrs. Edwin Smith, to consider the type of edifice desired and the question of cost.

Plans already prepared for consideration of the congregation call for an estimated outlay considerably in excess of the amount offered by the commissioners, it is understood, and these plans may be substantially modified or new ones adopted so as to make possible a reduction in the cost of replacing the present church.

Steps have been taken to incorporate the recently reorganized Montgomery County Foxhunters Association, the matter having been placed in the hands of Attorney William F. Prettyman, of Rockville. The articles of incorporation are expected to be filed in the near future. The weekly hunt of the association will be held tonight at the farm of Joseph Harris, near Potomac.

Stedman Prescott, attorney, of Rockville, will make an address at the annual tournament and picnic of the Burtonsville Grange today at the Grange Hall grounds in Burtonsville. Tilting by leading riders of the Montgomery and adjoining counties will be a feature of the program. The judges of the tournament will be County Commissioner Lacy Shaw, Robert Aitchison, George T. Sellers, George W. Athey, John G. Beall, Judge W. T. Wheeler and H. P. Millard.

The riders will compete first for the crowning of the queen and then tilt for the championship cup. A baby show, for children 1 to 2 years old, also will be held under the direction of Mrs. S. J. Athey. Supper will be served, to be followed by dancing in the evening.

The Rev. Guy E. Crook, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Poolesville, will preach the sermon in Christ Episcopal Church, Rockville, tomorrow evening, at the fourth of a series of Sunday night services arranged by the Rockville Ministerial Association. The final service will be in the Methodist Church, August 25, when the Rev. Henry K. Pasma, pastor of the Rockville Presbyterian Church, will officiate.

Noted Hobo Camp on Canal Broken Up at Cumberland

"The Jungle," Resting Place of Countless "Weary Willies" Gives Way to Progress—Known to Tramp Fraternity All Over Country.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16.—The "Weary Willie" fraternity is much perturbed because of the passing of "The Jungles," a retreat since the days of the opening of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. The carrying through of Cumberland's flood prevention plan demands the effacement of the noted hobo rest camp. Workmen for the Cumberland Contracting Co. are brushing out the lower Potomac River bank along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, preparatory to dredging the river bed. "The Jungles" extend for a mile south of the city, a primitive wilderness of trees and brush. A temporary railroad track is being built through the heart of the section.

The cutting down of brush and trees has brought to light a regular rabbit-warren of paths, the private springs, the camping places, the hillside caves for winter camping and tons of broken glass from "alky" parties. In the crotch of a tree, a weather-beaten beer keg, rudely carved with a swastika and the inscription, "Gone But Not Forgotten, R. I. P.," was found.

It was a delightful haven for the hobo and the town ne'er-do-well, where the river brought unlimited quantities of driftwood for fires around which numerous mulligan stew parties were held.

Since 1845, when the canal was dug, the place has been a haunt for the outcast and was known all over the country among the hobo fraternity. Close to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad yards, the box car traveler sought it out as a retreat. He could bathe, if he desired, could fish and he and his companions could cook at the campfire in privacy. Members of the camp would go out in all directions panhandling and would return with the "handouts" and have one big spread for all.

Coxey's famous army tarried for a while in 1894 when it boarded a canal boat here for the memorable pilgrimage to Washington. Strange to say, winter or summer, "The Jungles" have never been without an inhabitant. Now the denizens are looking mournfully at the desolation of the haunts and are seeking other quarters. "Hickey Hollow" and the old cement mill caves being most favored.

ANNAPOLIS HARBOR QUESTION SETTLED

Improved Water Facilities to Follow Restriction on Anchorage.

CHANNEL TO BE OPENED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 16.—Today's hearing concerning the Annapolis Harbor, held in the Court of Appeals Building before Maj. C. H. Pettis, United States Army engineer, resulted, in the belief of those who attended, in the creation of much improved water facilities in and to the city.

The meeting was called for the purpose of hearing information on the request of the Claiborne-Annapolis Ferry Co. for the creation of restricted anchorage. Business men of the city, including Mayor Walter E. Quenstedt, Counselor George B. Woelfel and Alderman Frank R. Thompson, jr., represented the city; Capt. Simon S. Martin and Joseph M. Armstrong, the Chamber of Commerce; Capt. William Halsey, the Naval Academy, while various representatives of water shipping interests of Baltimore, and Capt. Hudson, of the Tolchester Co., attended.

Mr. Sherman, of the ferry company, stated that in some cases boats anchored in the harbor refused to move even when requested. All agreed that some relief was necessary. In the end the company was allotted a 300-foot channel to be marked off by buoys. Other channels will be set aside for yachts en route to and from Annapolis, so that no inconvenience will be experienced in this respect.

Annapolis and nearby water men, who at first looked with awe upon the request of the ferry company, are now heartily in accord with the move, as the open channel probably will improve anchorage conditions in the harbor. The city agreed to give but one-half of the channel space sought, but the decision was generally agreeable.

West Virginia District Free of Corn Borers

Special to The Washington Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Reports that the European corn borer had invaded farms of this section, east of the State agricultural experiment station, were proved unfounded by Harry F. Muffly, county farm agent. His investigation revealed the presence of the stalk borer, which is less persistent and more easily killed than the European corn borer.

Reporting the presence of the stalk borer as due largely to growth of ragweeds, Muffly recommended that the ragweeds be cut, and the plants dried and burned. The northern panhandle is the only place in West Virginia where the European corn borer is known definitely to exist.

MARSHAL RELEASED ON BOND IN ATTACK

Deputy Federal Officer to Face Trial in Wounding of Virginian.

VICTIM TWICE CONVICTED

Richmond, Va., Aug. 16 (A.P.).—C. C. Collins, a deputy United States marshal, was released from jail at West Point today under bond of $2,000 in connection with the shooting of Peter Miller, of Sweethall, last night. Miller is being treated in a Richmond hospital.

Callon P. Jones, assistant district attorney, and W. B. Wiltshire, chief deputy marshal, went to King William court house today and the latter provided surety on the bond before magistrate W. H. Bland. The commonwealth's attorney agreed to the recognizance, made returnable to the King William court September 7. Jones said he would ask a transfer of the case to the district court on the grounds that the charge grows out of an action by Collins in line of duty as a Federal officer, armed with a warrant for the arrest of Miller, who had been twice convicted in King William County for violation of the prohibition law.

Collins declined to give his version of the shooting. S. H. Easter, Federal undercover officer, who accompanied Collins to the Miller home, made a report to prohibition headquarters today stating that Miller resisted arrest.

Mayor Crosby Thompson, of Port Richmond, today telegraphed President Hoover, requesting a full investigation by the Department of Justice. Thompson said an investigation showed "gross brutality and misuse of authority" on the part of the officers.

PARSONS FAMILY REUNION IS HELD

Scene of Gathering Is at Mount Moriah United Brethren Church.

EARLY HISTORY IS CITED

Special to The Washington Post.

Ripley, W. Va., Aug. 16.—The twenty-fifth annual reunion of the Parsons family in Jackson county was held at Mount Moriah United Brethren Church. It is claimed by one of the historians of the family that the earliest ancestor of the family in the Ohio valley was Charles Parsons, born in Maryland in 1745. It is stated he saw service in the French and Indian War as well as the Revolutionary War before making a settlement in 1794 in what was then Kanawha County, but now a part of the area of Jackson County. His brother, Joseph Parsons, was also an early settler of that county and it is maintained by one historian that if was at his home that the first religious services were held in what is now Jackson County, and a church class was organized in about the year 1803.

William Parsons, oldest son of Charles Parsons, came with his father from Maryland to the valley and afterwards became the first white settler at the present site of Ripley, the county seat of Jackson county, in 1800, or directly after that date, members of the family say. He was twice married and it has been ascertained by one of his posterity that at least sixteen children were born of the two marriages, grew to maturity and were married into the families of other early settlers of the then sparsely settled Ohio and Kanawha valleys.

He was an early surveyor, witnessing the formation of Kanawha County in 1788, Mason County in 1804 and Jackson County in 1831. He was one of the commissioners from Mason County that marked the old Point Pleasant and Clarksburg turnpike in 1807, one of the very earliest thoroughfares in the State. He died in 1839 and is buried at Frozen Camp in Jackson County.

L. M. Parsons, a prominent business and live stock man of Ripley has been president of the reunion since its organization. History of the family was recited yesterday by Judge William A. Parsons, Williamstown; Mrs. J. W. Board, Buffalo; Mrs. W. L. Logan, Mayor C. R. Kessel of Ripley Lynch, St. Albans, and E. V. Parsons, is a member of the family. An elaborate program was observed in connection with the reunion.

MERCHANTS UNITE AGAINST OPPOSITION

Cumberland Independents Will Wage War on Competition.

CAMPAIGN PLANS LAID

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 16.—The Community Builders Association, a body of local merchants whose object is to meet certain forms of competition, was organized last night at the Central Y. M. C. A. when about 100 merchants enrolled.

Thomas B. Finan, who presided, warned the group that legislation against the competition was not the answer to their problems. He pointed out that independent merchants must meet the competition on its own ground—that of improved methods, service and courtesy; attractive packing of goods, clean and attractive stores, and careful accounting.

An intensive educational and fact-displaying campaign will soon be inaugurated, in which some seeming economies of the competition will be demonstrated as being no better transactions than offered by independent merchants.

The exploitation of natural advantages such as the extension of credit, delivery of goods and other services performed by independent merchants, which the competition does not attempt, were also urged.

The meeting followed the visit of William L. Gulland, John G. Lynn, Virgil C. Powell, J. George Smith, J. Milton Patterson, George W. Martin and Edward ... Neff, to Washington, Pa., where a similar organization is conducting the same campaign with results. There were several visitors from Washington, Pa.

ROADS CHIEF FINED ON TRAFFIC CHARGE

Maryland Commission Head, Accused of Violations, Appeals Case.

DISCOURTESY IS DENIED

Special to The Washington Post.

Middletown, Md., Aug. 16.—G. Clinton Uhl, chairman of the Maryland Roads Commission, was fined $36 and costs, a total of $41.35, here this afternoon by Magistrate J. H. Kefauver on three charges of violation of the State motor vehicle laws. The fines were $25 for speeding, $10 for driving a car with the wrong State license tag and $1 for not having his driver's permit.

Uhl appealed the case to the Circuit Court of Frederick County. At the hearing he explained that he was driving a friend's car when he was arrested last Sunday in Middletown and that he was such a busy man that he did not have time to see if he had the right registration card when he left his home in Frostburg. He also said that the arresting officer, Lieut. C. C. Cassidy, was discourteous when he stopped him.

Cassidy, a State policeman, testified that Uhl drove through this town at a rate of 38 miles an hour and that the State official rebuked him for making the arrest. He denied that he had been discourteous to Uhl.
